Both medals with note to indicate medals from Bill Northam Collection.

Sir William Herbert 'Bill' Northam CBE, was a prominent businessman and did not take up sailing until his late 40s. He was successful in various sailing events, notably the Sayonara Cup in 1955 and 1956. He set himself the challenge of competing in the Olympic Games and travelled to the United States, where he arranged for a naval architect to design and build him a yacht, which he named Barrenjoey after the Barrenjoey Head Lighthouse near his Sydney home. He and his team qualified for the 1964 Summer Olympics in Tokyo, Japan, despite misgivings about Northam's age, now 59. He marched in the opening ceremony with his son Rod, who was a reserve member of the rowing team. The Australian team competed in the 5.5 metre class, and ended up winning the gold medal. It was Australia's first Olympic gold for sailing, and Northam remains the oldest Australian to win an Olympic gold medal.

In October 1913 there was a 'Great Strike' that affected all of New Zealand. It began on Wellington's wharves on 22 October 1913 and then spread, by 28th reaching Auckland. The Reform government planned to use the Army to intervene and occupy the wharves but then decided to use specially appointed civilian special constables. The first of these were signed up in November 1913 and in Auckland more than 1,900 were appointed, mainly from rural areas.

Ludlow Maynard La Costa Fox Bartrop was one of those appointed as a Special Mounted Constable. He also served in WWI with the Auckland Mounted Rifles, service number 13/294. He embarked on 16 October 1914 to Egypt and then to Gallipoli where he was KIA on 8 August 1915 at age 41. He is commemorated at the Chunuk Bair (New Zealand) Memorial at Gallipoli, Turkey. He was the son of Major George Frederick and Julia Bartrop of Armidale, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia.

In the Royal Society of the Arts transaction book is the following,

'The Silver Medal was this Session voted to Mr G.Spark, of Elgin, Murrayshire, Scotland, for his Method of ascertaining the Hour in the night, by an Apparatus, connected with a common Watch. The following Communication was received from him. An Explanatory Engraving is annexed, and a complete Apparatus preserved in the Society's Repository.'

George Spark's communication to the Society and addressed to C.Taylor, M.D. (Mechanics Division) Sec, dated at Elgin, March 7, 1810, was as follows,

'By Mr John Newton, watchmaker, I have forwarded an invention for knowing the hour in the dark, by feeling. I think it is preferable to a repeater, on account of its simplicity and cheapness. It is not liable to be out of order, and it does not require the exertion necessary for pushing the pendant of a repeater, nor disturb any person near it. For these reasons I diffidently wish to have the honor of laying this invention, which I call a Noctuary, before the Society; and to be favored with their decision on its merits.'

The barony of Calder was occupied by the Douglas family until the first half of the 14th century whereupon it was gifted to Sir James de Sandilands when Eleanor Douglas married him. The mansion, Calder House was built in the 16th century. It is possible that William Reid Douglas, a carpenter at Calder House was one and the same as the William Reid Douglas who immigrated to Otago, New Zealand and in about 1860 set up a small sawmill at the confluence of the Leith and School Creek. Its wheel was driven by water from the Pine Hill Creek, picked up at the site of the present bridge over the creek.

OBE: Supplement to LG 1/1/1974, p21, to Hedley Lawry Yelland for services to the State (of NSW).

French Order of Palmes Academiques (Order of Academic Palms) on 18 February 1972 for services rendered to French culture: Mr Yelland made successful representations for the establishment of French schools at both primary and secondary levels in NSW and for the employment of the first French Orienteur Pedagogique in Australia. He also supported the sending of French teachers to the Noumea seminar and the filling of assistantship in France. When the French drama company, Treateau de Paris, visited NSW he arranged for the distribution of copies of the plays presented and for the attendance of school pupils at matinee performances.

Hedley Lawry Yelland was born in 1906 at Sydney. His father died before he was born and his mother died in 1911. He was raised at Bega by his German grandmother and two unmarried aunts. After completing primary school at Bega he attended Goulburn High School on a state bursary and after matriculating at 16 he went to the University of Sydney on a teacher training scholarship. He graduated in 1925 and in the following year completed a Diploma in Education.

In 1927 Hedley started working with the NSW Education Department holding teaching positions at Hurlstone Agricultural High School, Hay War Memorial High, Newcastle High, then as administrator at Lismore High, deputy head of Murwillumbah High and then headmaster of his old school, Goulburn High. In 1950 he was promoted to secondary inspector and over the ensuing years he became director of secondary education and in 1969 the education member of the Public Service Board.

The highlight of his career was being delegated by Dr (later Sir) Harold Wyndham the huge task of administering the Wyndham Scheme, set up in the early 1950s, to review and recommend changes to the secondary education system in NSW. This was the scheme that ultimately would replace the leaving certificate, after five years of schooling, with the school certificate after four years and the higher school certificate after a further two years of schooling. The scheme also recommended a move towards large, comprehensive, co-educational high schools. As director of secondary education Yelland implemented the Wyndham Scheme changes into the classroom. He believed selective schools were unnecessary but as a compromise to implementing the scheme, entrenched selective schools, such as Sydney High and Fort Street, were retained.

While on the Public Service Board, Hedley was involved in many aspects of government. He also served as chairman of the Archives Authority of NSW, was appointed to the Sydney Opera House Trust in 1969 helping to organise the opening of the Opera House in 1973, was chairman of the Sydney Symphony Orchestra and was involved in the restoration of Vacluse House for the Historic Houses Trust. He co-authored and edited 'A Handbook of Literary Terms', a standard reference work in its field and in 1988, after his wife died, he wrote his memoirs titled, 'Grandma's Pistol: A Public Service Life', to be published after his death. A copy of this manuscript is in the Sate Library of NSW. Hedley Yelland died at home in Sydney in 2006 at the age of 100.

David Richard Davies, born at Ballarat, Victoria, commenced shooting in 1901, with the Victorian Railways Rifle Club, and proved to be one of the most consistent marksmen in Australia. In 1909 he won the Campbell match at the V.R.A. annual prize meeting, with a score of 49 at 600 yards, and finished third in the junior aggregate over 300, 500 and 600 yards, with scores of 47, 49, 49, which was only five points short of the possible. At the V.R.A. matches in 1910 he was third in the Marshall match at 600 yards, with a possible 50, while in a teams match at 900 yards he registered 74 out of a possible 75. At the V.R.A. matches in 1912, he finished fourth in the King's, and won the Tasmanian 600 and 700 yards match.

On 14 July 1915, at the age of 33 and stating that he was a clerk in the Stores Branch of the Railway Department and that he was a widower, he enlisted as a Private with the 39th Battalion. By the time he embarked on 20 October 1916 for overseas service he was a 2nd Lieutenant. He served with the 39th until wounded in action at Messines in Belgium on 4 August 1917. He left to return to Australia on 12 March 1918 and was discharged on 1 October 1920 and placed on the Retired List as an Honorary Lieutenant.

In the V.R.A. King's prize for 1924 he finished ninth, recording one of the only two possibles scored at 900 yards. After being selected by the VRA as its contribution to the Australian Team to Bisley, he was given a send off night by members of the Melbourne Cricket Club Rifle Club on Saturday 26 April. After his departure for Bisley he was elected vice-captain of this club.

At Bisley, he won the All Comers' Aggregate Challenge Cup of £250 and thereby became one of the Australian select few who have achieved this distinction, and registered the first outright success of the Australian team during the 1924 series. This cup was won previously in 1907 by Lieutenant G. Shaw and in 1914 by C. Cross. The All Comers' Aggregate includes practically all the open events except the King's, the Prince of Wales and the St. George, and is thus a difficult prize to win.

Lieutenant Davies was also a winner at the London & Middlesex Meeting held prior to the NRA Bisley tournament. The London & Middlesex Rifle Association has its club within Bisley Camp.

Victorian Humane Society Silver Medal, missing suspender, reverse inscribed, 'Martin A.Peterson/11 Septbr 1876'. Very fine.

$1,000

Martin Peterson was boatswain of the steamer Dandenong and one of the four crew members who made two perilous journeys between the vessel and the rescue barque, Albert William, and saved many lives. Originally some members of the Victorian Humane Society committee wanted to award gold medals to Mr Dykes, 2nd engineer and Martin Peterson, however, after much deliberation, it was decided that the bravery of all four crew should be equally acknowledged and each receive a silver medal. The silver medal recipients were John Dykes, 2nd engineer; Martin Alfred Peterson, boatswain; James Anderson, A.B.; and John Ekluyd, A.B.

An account of the tragedy that resulted in the loss of the steamer Dandenong on Monday 11 September 1876 was reported at the time as follows.

'The Newcastle barque, Albert William, from Wallaroo, arrived at Newcastle early this morning, and created a profound sensation by reporting that the steamer Dandenong, from Melbourne to Sydney, had been lost off Cape Everard on Monday last. The barque had on board twenty-eight of the passengers and twelve of the crew of the unfortunate steamer, all the rest having been drowned. The chief officer of the Dandenong, who is amongst those saved, reports that the Dandenong left Melbourne at 5 p.m. on Friday last, cleared decks, and squared away for Sydney. On the following day she encountered nothing but steady airs and light weather, and there was every promise of the passage being a speedy and pleasant one.

At 5 p.m., on Saturday, however, the wind suddenly shifted to the eastward, and rapidly gained force, until it blew a terrific gale. At 2 p.m. on Sunday, land, supposed to be Cape Everard, was in sight. All day on Sunday there were terrible trying times, and all hands were directed exclusively assisting in whatever measures were practicable for the safety of the ship. At 1 a.m. on Monday the 11th, the engineer reported that the engines had broken down, and the captain immediately hauled his ship off shore as well as he could. On the failure of the engines becoming known, the passengers appeared to be fully alive to their awful position, but still order prevailed. It was soon found that the shaft had broken completely in two, and a portion of it falling had knocked a large hole in the bottom of the vessel. The ship at once commenced to take much water; and her after-compartment was rapidly filled. The result was that she was still more at the mercy of the seas, which washed over her and threatened every moment to complete the dreadful work of destruction.

The crew and passengers all this time, amidst great difficulties, were working like horses at the pumps, vainly trying to keep the water down. But finding this was impossible, and the water rapidly gaining, orders were given to open the fore and main hatches and throw over cargo, in order if possible to lighten the ship. An attempt was also made to stop the hole with beds and mattresses, but the water had gained so far that it was impossible to do so, and it was evident that the unfortunate Dandenong was gradually settling down, with no earthly hope for her passengers and crew, the sea being so terrible that the idea of a boat living in it was hardly considered.

At two p. m. on Monday a sail was discovered on the port bow, and the Dandenong at once made signals of distress, and headed for the vessel, which, after an anxious time, altered her course to meet the disabled and sinking steamer. The vessel turned out to be the Albert William, from Wallaroo to Newcastle, and amidst the hearty thanksgiving of the passengers she ran alongside the steamer, and appeared even in that dreadful sea to be a haven of safety for those on board the Dandenong. A line was thrown from the port bow of the barque to the steamer; but the captain of the barque being afraid of destroying both vessels if he approached too close to the steamer, those on board the Dandenong who were on the look-out missed the rope.

The boats of the Dandenong were then lowered, although there was a frightful sea running. By dint of enormous exertions 28 passengers and 12 of the crew were saved. Seventeen persons were drowned in transhipping to the barque, and darkness coming on the barque could not stand by any longer, leaving forty passengers and crew on the wreck. The Dandenong lights suddenly disappeared between eight and nine o'clock on Monday night, at which time she is supposed to have foundered. There was only one good boat available on board the Dandenong at that time. When daylight came nothing could be seen of the steamer, and the barque squared away at 8 in the morning. There was only one boat and it made two trips. The passengers and crew saved from the Dandenong look in a deplorable condition. Hundreds of people, assembled on the wharf to witness their landing. A deputation has just waited on the Mayor, asking him to call, a public meeting to afford relief to the sufferers.

Royal Humane Society of Australasia bronze Medal, with ribbon brooch bar, reverse of medal inscribed to 'Allen/Christopher/Bolt/27.10.09'. In Stokes & Sons, maker's case named to Allen Christopher Bolt, uncirculated.

$750

Together with original award document, in leather cover, named to Allen Christopher Bolt of Murthoo, St Australia, Farmer, aged 35, on rescuing Robert Hall from drowning in the River Murray at Paringa S.A, October 27th 1909, dated at Melbourne 10th February 1910 and signed by Secretary, R.W.E.Wilmot and President, G.Lush.

Reports at the time stated that the newly established punt at Paringa, two miles below Renmark, was the scene of a disaster on 27 October. Mr. R. Smales, assisted by Messrs August Greatz, K. Bolt, Ullrich, and Hall, was crossing a mob of horses, purchased at the Kapunda sale. Two trips had been successfully made, but during the last, in the dusk of the evening, the horses, 17 in number, became restive, and in the attempt to keep them in hand, Hall was knocked overboard. Allen Christopher 'Kit' Bolt jumped into the middle of the crushing, swirling river (and it does swirl in flood time at Paringa), coat, boots and all, to save young Hall from drowning. He supported Hall in the water until picked up by Mr Proudfoot and Mr Rogers, who reached them just in time with their boat to save rescuer and rescued from a watery grave.

During the commotion Greatz was seen to make a clean dive overboard, which was the last seen of him. His body was found in a billabong a few days later. All the horses were thrown out of the punt, which broke from the cross chain, and seven were drowned. Smales and Ullrich stuck to the punt, and were taken off by Proudfoot. Hall would certainly have lost his life but for Bolt's courage. The accident happened in midstream. The river at Paringa is now some 600 yards wide, and just at the crossing there is a particularly swift, swirling current.

Mr Pitt, the chairman of the punt trustees indicated that an account of Mr Bolt's action had been forwarded to the authorities. Mr Bolt is a fine type of the Australian bushman, and would doubtless disclaim, any pretensions to heroism; but there are occasions when the public have a right to demand that a man's native modesty be overborne. And this is one of them.

Great Britain, halfpenny (?), both sides shaved, on one side is engraved, 'Ann/Wright/1786', and on the other side is engraved a female with hat walking left holding a posy and with flowers in front and behind. Good very fine.

$250

Ann Wright, a servant, was tried at the Old Bailey in London on 26 May 1784 for stealing clothing, medals and coins. The court was told, 'the devil was very busy in her, she was in liquor'. She was found guilty and sentenced to 7 years transportation to America. Due to the American Revolutionary War, Ann's destination for transportation was altered at the February Sessions of Middlesex in 1785 to Africa. However, this destination was decided to be not satisfactory so it was decided to send her to Botany Bay with the first fleet due to depart from Portsmouth, England on the Lady Penrhyn on 13 May 1787.

Many of the female convicts from Newgate, the main London prison, were sent to the Lady Penrhyn in January 1787 with Ann being transferred on 6 January. The ship then sailed to Motherbank, Isle of Wight arriving on 10 February. Heavy weather delayed the fleet assembling and it was a further two months before the fleet was ready to depart. During this waiting period there was fever on board the Lady Penrhyn and its only victim was Ann Wright at age 33. The Captain's log recorded as follows, 'Wednesday 4th April 1787 Winds variable. Departed this life Ann Wright, convict. Committed the body to the deep with the usual Ceremony.' Subsequently the first fleet departed on 13 May 1787.

There is no provenance accompanying this token other than one of the coins that she was accused of stealing was an engraved halfpenny. During her time in Newgate Prison, which includes time in the year 1786, it is quite feasible that she could have had a similar piece produced and given to a loved one prior to her transfer in early January 1787.

See article in The Australiana Society, Australiana magazine, Vol 28 No 1, February 2006, 'Ann Wright 1786' - a love token? by Les Carlisle.

Hugh Taylor was a politician who was born at Parramatta on 19 March 1823. He cultivated an image as 'the poor man's friend'. In 1872 he was elected as the Member for Parramatta but due to the vicious sectarian violence of one of his opponents, a Protestant, Taylor, a Roman Catholic, decided to resign. However, he won the subsequent by-election and went on to be the elected representative for many years. In the House of Assembly he was a staunch ally of (Sir) Henry Parkes and in fact acted as best man at Henry's third marriage. He died on 13 December 1897 and is buried in the family vault in the Catholic section of Parramatta Cemetery.
