'Sir John Lackey KCMG (6 October 1830 - 11 November 1903) was a magistrate and politician in colonial New South Wales, President of the New South Wales Legislative Council 1892 to 1903.

Lackey was born in Sydney, New South Wales, son of William Lackey and his second wife Mary nee O'Dowd. His grandfather was a wealthy publican and paid for his education. Lackey was educated at the Sydney College, subsequently adopting pastoral pursuits in the Parramatta district. In 1852 he became a magistrate.

He unsuccessfully contested Central Cumberland at the 1859 election. He was the first of two members elected for Parramatta at the election on 8 December 1860. James Byrnes took offence at being placed second behind a newcomer, stating that the majority of voters had decided that he was not fit to serve them and resigned in March 1861 without taking his seat. Lackey strongly supported the passing of the Robertson Land Acts in 1861. He was defeated at Parramatta at the election on 24 November 1864, but on 27 June 1867 he won the Central Cumberland by-election to re-enter the Assembly.

He was Chairman of Committees from February 1870 August 1872. From February 1875 to March 1877, he was Secretary for Public Works in the third Robertson ministry. In 1877 he was Minister of Justice and Public Instruction in the short-lived fourth Robertson ministry and was again Secretary for Public Works in the Parkes-Robertson Administration from December 1878 to January 1883. In August 1885 he resigned from the Legislative Assembly and was appointed to the Legislative Council in December 1885. In 1889 he was the Vice-President of the Executive Council in the second Dibbs ministry. In August 1892 he was appointed President of the Legislative Council, serving until his resignation as president on 23 May 1903.

Lackey died on 11 November 1903 (aged 73) in Bong Bong, New South Wales, survived by two sons. He was made a Knight Commander of the Order of St Michael and St George (KCMG) in 1894.'

In Summer Hill, Sydney, NSW, the main street leading to the railway station is named Lackey Street in honour of John Lackey.

Robert Lewis John Ellery (1827-1908) was born on 14 July 1827 at Cranleigh, Surrey, England. He trained as a surgeon (M.R.C.S.) however his true interest was in astronomy. He migrated to Australia in 1852 and settled at Williamstown, Melbourne, Victoria. He advocated for an observatory at Williamstown and Governor Charles La Trobe acted on the suggestion and Ellery was appointed as its first director, a position he would hold for the next forty years. During this time he would conduct many outstanding researches and also move the astronomy to a more suitable location in Melbourne Domain.

Ellery had various other interests and was president of the Royal Society of Victoria 1866-85, treasurer of the Council of the University of Melbourne, chairman of the board of the Alfred Hospital and a trustee of the Public Library, Gallery and Museum. He was also actively involved in the Australian Antarctic Exploration Committees. He was also in the colonial forces and as a captain he helped establish the Victorian Torpedo and Signal Corps, retiring in December 1888 as lieutenant-colonel. As a hobby he was also president of the Victorian Beekeepers' Club and editor of their journal.

Robert Ellery was elected a fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society in 1855 and the Royal Society in 1873. He was appointed C.M.G. in 1889. He died at Melbourne on 14 January 1908.

Following is an extract from a report in The Kiama Reporter and Illawarra Journal, Wednesday 2 April 1941, page 4.

'The death occurred at his residence, Meadowbank, Albion Park, on Sunday last, of Mr Alick Horsley Weston, following a short illness, at the age of 77. He was the second son of the late Major Edward H. Weston and Mrs Weston of The Meadows, Albion Park, and a descendent on the maternal side of Colonel George Johnston, who became acting Governor of New South Wales at the time of the Bligh Rebellion.

The late Alick Weston was born at Horsley, Smithfield, in the Prospect district, but spent practically all his life at The Meadows, Albion Park, where for many years he took a very active and prominent part in the public life of the district. There was a long military tradition in the family, and when the Illawarra Cavalry troop was formed at Albion Park in 1885, he held a commission in this and was distinguished in many competitions which were held. He always took a great interest in militia activities and won many trophies and tournaments. He was also a very keen rifle shot.

The Weston family for many years had been well-known for their fine horses, and Alick Weston also followed this tradition, not only exhibiting at the various shows, but also as an owner and breeder of such fine stock as the hack, Warrior, the hunter, Hamlet, and hurdlers, Blackall, Warrigal and Creamy Jack. The older generation will long remember the Weston horses from Albion Park.

In other local activities and progressive movements, his advice and assistance was always available to his fellow citizens and primary producers. For many years, he was an Alderman of the Shellharbour Council and a prominent member of the Albion Park Agricultural Society, holding the office of treasurer, and being of great assistance at all the shows.

The late Mr Weston was also a member of the Board of Directors of the Illawarra Co-operative Central Dairy Society, and for some years was chairman. A few years ago, he was compelled, through ill-health, to relinquish all his public activities, and had lived in retirement.'

Alick Horsley Weston was buried on Monday 31 March 1941 at the Church of England Cemetery at Albion Park, following a well attended service at All Saints Church where he had been a Churchwarden for many years.

Ephraim Laman (Lamen) Zox (22 October 1837 - 23 October 1899) was an Australian financier and politician. Zox was according to some sources born in Liverpool, England, son of Eliazer Laman Zox (died 1882), proprietor of a large cap-making business. It seems more likely that he was born in London. In the 1851 London Census Ephraim's place of birth, like that of all his siblings, was given as London, where the family were living. Their address was Long Acre, near London's Covent Garden, and their cap manufacturer father's place of birth was given as Prussia; the mother's birthplace was not given.

Ephraim arrived in Melbourne in December 1852 and worked as an assistant to his cousin Lewis Myer Myers (1830-1891), in a soft goods firm. From 1863 he partnered with Myers in a warehouse business; and, for about five years from 1866, his brother Joseph joined him in Melbourne. On 15 May 1879 his partnership with Myers was dissolved by mutual consent, and the next year he set up on his own as 'financial agent and arbitrator', Collins Street West.

He was appointed Justice of the Peace for the "Melbourne District" in May 1874.

Following the death of Edward Cohen in April 1877, Zox was elected to the Legislative Assembly seat of East Melbourne in May 1877 - he was one of the 27 newly elected members - and served in that capacity until his own death in 1899.

A conservative, he opposed payment of members and protection amid the bitter party strife which accompanied Sir Graham Berry's second government, and such measures as income tax and female suffrage in the 1890s. A supporter of the coalitions of the 1880s and of Sir James Patterson's ministry, he was more consistent and predictable than many of his contemporaries.

He was a flamboyant figure, invariably dressed in a white waistcoat so pristine in appearance that he was jocularly said to have 365 of them, one for every day of the year. Good natured, genial and popular, he spoke in Parliament in a typically bantering style, and his puns were a byword, but he was less at ease on serious subjects. He was a keen student of Shakespeare and stories were told of his remarkable aptitude for arithmetic. He was a 'useful and painstaking' chairman of the royal commissions on asylums for the insane and inebriate (reported 1884-86), on banking laws (1887) and on charitable institutions (1890, 1891, 1895); he was also a member of the commissions on the working of the Friendly Societies Statute (1875-77) and the tariff (1881-83).

Zox was president of the Melbourne Hebrew congregation in 1883 - 85, treasurer of the Melbourne Hebrew School in 1883 and president of the Melbourne Jewish Club in 1885. In 1890 he chaired a meeting of the Melbourne branch of the Anglo-Jewish Association of London which protested against Jewish persecution in Russia. He was vice-president of the Discharged Prisoners' Aid Society from 1885 and chairman in 1898 - 99, a director of the Royal Humane Society of Australasia and a board member of several hospitals. He was prominent in the Manchester Unity Order of Oddfellows. Zox suffered financial reverses in the early 1890s, but was still known for his earnest devotion to charitable movements and for his ready assistance to 'forlorn wayfarers'.

He died, aged 62, on 23 October 1899, in a private hospital at St Kilda of pneumonia brought on by influenza. He was buried in the Melbourne General Cemetery. His estate, valued for probate at £4400, was left to his two brothers and two sisters in London and a sister in Cape Town, South Africa.

The following was reported in The Sydney Morning Herald, Monday 28 July 1913, page 6.

'A VETERAN LANCER.

Major E. H. Weston, one of the oldest retired military officers in the State, died at his residence, Lochinvar, Hale-road, Mosman, and was buried at Albion Park. He had almost completed his 80th year, and was one of the founders and first members of the New South Wales Lancers. He was born at Horsley, near Parramatta, and for many years carried on pastoral pursuits. In his younger days he was renowned for feats of horsemanship, being regarded as one of the finest horsemen in the State.

His father, the late G. E. Weston, was a native of England, and his mother only died eight years ago, aged 98. The funeral was one of the largest ever seen at Albion Park.'

Major Edward Henry Weston's father was an officer in the British Army in colonial India and his mother was the daughter of Colonel Johnston of Annandale, a suburb in Sydney. Johnston Street is named in his honour. He acted as Governor of New South Wales following the arrest of Governor Bligh. His mother's uncle, Captain Robert Johnston, was the first Australian officer to join the British Navy.

Also, the following was a letter to the editor in the Illawarra Mercury, Thursday 18 October 1894, page 2.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE

(To the Editor)

'I think that every lover of his country will regret the absence of Captain E. H. Weston and his son Alick from the late sham-fight at Wollongong. It was the Captain who organised the South Coast troop of cavalry, and all the members of that troop whom I have the honor to know would follow him not only in a sham-fight but to 'grim death' itself, if he would lead them. There has been a ' blunder ' somewhere in his resigning his commission. He is "a soldier every inch," and so also is his brave young son; then why were they not present? The services of such men should not be forgotten by the military authorities of our country, for honor should be paid where, and to whom, it is due. I do hope to see both father and son "shoulder to shoulder" again at our next sham fight, whenever that may come off. We should honor brave, self-denying men, for we have not too many of them. J.S.

The following was reported in The Sydney Morning Herald on Tuesday 5 February 1918, page 7.

'BRENDAN LANE MULLINS MEDAL.

By arrangement with the Australian Historical Society, Mr. John Lane Mullins, M.L.C., has provided for the annual donation of a gold medal, of the value of £5, in memory of his only son, Lieutenant Brendan Lane Mullins, R.F.A., who gave his life in the cause of freedom and Australia, at Arras, France, on June 14, 1917.

The medal was open to competition to candidates sitting for the Leaving Certificate Examination, and was to be awarded to the candidate presenting the best answers in the Honors Paper in Australian History at that examination, provided that the Chief Examiner in that subject (the professor of history at the Sydney University) certified that the answers were of approved merit.

On Professor Wood's recommendation, the Australian Historical Society has allotted the first "Brendan Lane Mullins" Memorial Medal to Malcolm William Donald McIntyre, of the Scots College.'

John Francis Lane Mullins, P.C., K.C.S.G., (1857-1939) was admitted as a solicitor in 1885 and was called to the bar in 1930. He helped form the NSW Irish Rifle Regiment in which he was a captain. During his life he held many positions including being an alderman on Sydney City Council, a Nationalist Party member of the NSW Legislative Council, honorary treasurer of St Mary's Cathedral, honorary treasurer of St Vincent's Hospital, director of Tooheys Ltd, Toohey Standard Securities Ltd, Lisgar Investment and Building Society, The City Mutual Fire Insurance Ltd and other positions. In 1903 John Mullins was appointed a Privy Chamberlain to Pope Pius X and a Knight Commander of St Gregory in 1917.

Walter George Keith Duncan was a student at Sydney Technical High School. The Brendan Lane-Mullins Memorial Medal was presented to Walter Duncan by Mr P.Board, Director of Education at the annual presentation of prizes held at the school on Wednesday 23 March 1921. Duncan went on to become a professional academic.'

Walter George Keith Duncan was born at Leichhardt, Sydney, New South Wales on 11 July 1903 to his New Zealand born parents. He was educated at Fort Street Boys' High School and the University of Sydney where he graduated with a Bachelor of Arts degree in 1924 and a Master of Arts degree in 1926. He graduated with first class honours and was awarded a medal in history and another in philosophy and then completed his master's degree passing with first class honours and another medal for philosophy.

He was awarded a James King of Irrawang travelling scholarship and studied in both England and the United States of America. After his return to Australia in 1932, Duncan had a distinguished career in the education system including with universities in Sydney and Adelaide from 1951 as well as being involved with various commissions into education. Walter Duncan died at North Adelaide on 18 December 1987.

Note: Although a biographical report states that Walter George Keith Duncan was educated at Fort Street Boys' High School there is a newspaper report that states that he was awarded the Brendan Lane-Mullins Memorial Medal in 1921 based on his Leaving Certificate examinations in 1920 at Sydney Technical High School.

Joseph Seppelt left Silesia in Prussia in 1849 and came to Australia, arriving at the Barossa Valley in South Australia in 1851. He tried producing tobacco, one of the products he worked with in Prussia, but that failed so he turned to wine. He planted vines near Greenock at a place he called Seppeltsfield. This was successful. Unfortunately he died in 1868 but his family developed the business and by the 1890s it was the largest wine company in Australia.

After federation, B. Seppelt and Sons expanded by purchasing other operations, including Chateau Tanunda in 1916 and the Great Western vineyard and winery in 1918 and other properties over the ensuing years. It became a publicly listed company in 1970 and was taken over by SA Brewing in 1984.

Frederick Norton Manning (25 February 1839 - 18 June 1903), was a medical practitioner, naval surgeon, Inspector General of the Insane for the Colony of New South Wales, and was an Australian Lunatic Asylum Superintendent. He was a leading figure in the establishment of a number of lunatic asylums in the colonies of New South Wales and Victoria, and participated in inquests and reviews of asylums throughout the colonies. In fact when he first came to Australia in 1867 as a navy surgeon, via active service in New Zealand, he was invited by Henry Parkes to become medical superintendent of the Tarban Creek Lunatic Asylum, a job he accepted after further study of methods employed overseas and on 15 October 1868 he was appointed to the Tarban Creek position.

He had a distinguished career which can be viewed on Wikipedia. He died on 18 June 1903 and in accordance with his instructions he was buried in the cemetery at Gladesville Mental Hospital.

In September 1907 the University of Sydney received a letter from the honorary treasurer of the Dr F.Norton Manning memorial fund enclosing the sum of one hundred and twenty five pounds for a foundation of an annual prize in psychological medicine to be called the 'Dr F.Norton Manning Memorial Prize'. The University resolved that the gift be accepted with thanks.
