The Melbourne Militors (a Latin word that means 'little soldiers') held their first meeting in August 1940. Its mostly young girl members aged from 16 to 26 trained in first aid, home nursing, despatch riding, ARP, Morse code as well as rifle shooting at the Moreland miniature rifle range and military drill, this under the instruction of an army sergeant, and its officers had military titles. The uniform selected comprised khaki shorts and shirt worn with a bottle green tie and khaki woollen socks. They wore a Tank Corps cap with a badge being a disc with MM in gold, with a row of gold oak leaves below. On 1 December 1941 the group numbering about 300 decided to disband because of what they felt was the government's discouraging attitude toward making full use of women for war work. Miss Helen Caught, the adjutant, said the names of members were to be left on the Women's Voluntary Register for national service but meetings were to be discontinued.

The following article was published in The Sydney Morning Herald on Monday 7 December 1868, page 5.

'NEW SOUTH WALES RIFLE ASSOCIATION.

Presentation of Prizes.

The presentation of prizes to the successful competitors at the annual rifle matches is always anticipated with a good deal of interest, not only by the successful competitors themselves, but by the Volunteers generally. Hitherto, upon these occasions there has invariably been a good turnout of all arms of the force, and the large concourse of persons who assemble to witness the evolutions and to appreciate the efforts of the men to perform properly their duty as citizen-soldiers in the field, gives zest to the display. We believe that the Rifle Association and the Volunteers have been favoured with fine weather at every annual gathering of this kind, but on Saturday morning last the gloomy appearance of the atmosphere warranted the fear that the ceremony would have to be performed in the rain. Fortunately, however, the weather remained sufficiently fine for every purpose, except that its appearance deterred many persons from leaving home who otherwise would have found their way into the Domain. From those remarks it will be inferred that the attendance of the general public was not so large as it has been upon some similar occasions when the weather was finer, and when Sir John and Lady Young lent, as they invariably did, the attraction of their presence. In the Domain, a dais, nicely draped with flags, was erected under the trees to the eastward of the cricket ground, and a large space in front of it was kept clear by a body of Metropolitan police, under the direction of Mr. Sub-inspector Reed, for the evolutions of the Volunteers. On either side of the dais an enclosure was preserved for the accommodation of members of the association and their friends who had tickets of admission.

The muster of Volunteers was a large one, and on this occasion they were brigaded with all the available men of the 50th ("Queen's Own") Regiment. The Volunteers fell in at Hyde Park Barracks, and at a few minutes to 3 o'clock marched along Macquarie-street into the Domain, where they formed up in open column, right in front facing the south. On the extreme south of the line were the Volunteer Artillery, Nos. 1 and 2 Batteries, having field gun; the 50th Regiment; then the Suburban Battalion, with whom were the Parramatta, Penrith, and Hawkesbury companies of Volunteers, the Highlanders, and the Cadets. Next were the six companies of the Sydney Battalion, with the Naval Brigade on the extreme left. The column wheeled into line, and received the commandant, Colonel Waddy, with presented arms. The line then wheeled back into open column, and the inspection by Colonel Waddy took place. The three battalions then wheeled into line again, and deployed in rear of front companies, closed to six paces interval on centre battalion, and advanced to within fifty yards of the dais, when they halted, and formed three sides of a hollow square. The winners were then called to the front. Sir William Manning, President of the Association; Captain Beresford, A.D.C.; Mr. Toulmin, Mr. H. C. Dangar, Mr. Brewer, and other gentlemen, Mrs. Waddy, Miss Manning, Mrs. Toulmin, and several other ladies occupied the dais.

During the seven years that Sir John Young held office in this colony he never failed to be present at the annual presentation of prizes to the successful competitors in the annual trials of skill with the rifle, and he always availed himself of the opportunity to deliver, with that consummate ability which so eminently distinguished him, a model little speech to the Volunteers, encouraging them to persevere in the path of duty, and pointing out the dangers into which they were liable to fall; while the prize winners were always gratified by receiving from the hands of Lady Young the rewards of their skill. The different prize men were called up and received their prizes from Mrs. Waddy.'

The first prize winner to be called up was Private Slade, No.1 Company who received twenty pounds and a medal.

Infantry Officer's sword, 1892, with rare Royal Engineer's 1857 pattern hilt, etched straight steel blade as introduced in 1892 marked at the hilt by maker, 'Moubray Rowan & Hicks, Melbourne', the guard with attractive scrolling acanthus leaves and is of the type of hilt introduced in 1857 and retained until 1900, sharkskin grip on handle bound with gold wire, brown leather scabbard with steel fittings. Etched pattern on blade worn, otherwise fine.

The hilt of this sword has the Royal Engineer's 1857 pattern with attractive scrolling acanthus leaves on the guard. In 1892 the blade was changed to the new straight thrust design with the 1857 hilt initially retained but by the year 1900 the Royal Engineers were regulated to carry the same hilt pattern that the infantry had already adopted.

According to the family, this sword was issued to Arthur James Arnot and has been in the one family since it was issued. Arthur James Arnot was born at Hamilton, Scotland on 26 August 1865. He was an electrical engineer and arrived in Melbourne, Victoria in 1889 to erect a large alternating current plant for the Union Electric Co. He patented the world's first electric drill on 20 August 1889. He installed a comprehensive system of street lighting in Melbourne between 1891 and 1892 as well as managing the Spencer Street power station from 1894 to 1901. He held many other important association positions as well as being a Lieutenant in the Submarine Company, Victorian Engineers from 1894 and transferring to the Reserve of Officers in 1900. He resigned his commission in 1912 but when war broke out in 1914 he was recommissioned in July 1915 into the Australian Engineers and promoted to Captain initially and then in 1916 to Major. In 1918-19 he was Director of Works in the Department of the Chief of Ordnance. He transferred to the Reserves in 1920 and retired in 1925 with the rank of Major. He died on 15 October 1946 at Castle Hill, NSW.
