$100

The ship named SS Moolton, was built by Caird & Company of Greenock, Yard No 306 and launched on 3rd August 1905, Mooltan was powered by two steam quadruple expansion steam engines, giving her a service speed of 17 knots. She had accommodation for 348 1st and 166 2nd class passengers with a tonnage of 9621 grt, length 520 feet and breadth of 58 feet. Completed on 4th October 1905, she made her maiden voyage to Bombay. In 1906 she transferred to the London - Colombo - Melbourne - Sydney service and in 1911 took part in the Coronation Naval review at Spithead. SS Mooltan, like many steamships carrying the Royal Mail, and were contracted to carry the mail between Australia and Britain. On occasion, parts of the ship were booked by the Australian Imperial Force (AIF) to carry troops and cargo. The 3rd Australian General Hospital, AIF, was set up in response to a request from the British War Office by Thomas Henry Fiaschi, (a well-known Italian surgeon). On 15 May 1915, RMS Mooltan departed from Circular Quay, Sydney, on board were the 273 nurses of the 3rd AGH all from the Australian Nursing Service, that was formed only one month after its formation had been requested.

The RMS Mooltan arrived at Plymouth on 27 June 1915 and the nursing unit travelled to London. There, preparations were made for their service in France at Etaples. However, on 1 July, 3rd AGH received orders to proceed to Mudros on the island of Lemnos in the Aegean Sea near Gallipoli.

3 A.G.H. first started admitting patients, where the majority were wounded men from the August offensive, and it was these patients the hospital had been set up for, with operating theatres and surgeons on the staff. In later months, nearly all the patients were ill with either dysentery or para typhoid. Some of the staff of the hospital also fell ill, though the nurses suffered less, probably by practising better hygiene. In late November and December, the casualties changed again as troops were caught in freezing weather on the Peninsula without adequate clothing, and many were admitted to the hospitals on Lemnos suffering from severe frostbite. The last Australians were evacuated from Gallipoli on the night of 19/20 December, and many spent Christmas on Lemnos while waiting for further orders. The whole evacuation of allied troops took three weeks. In spite of earlier predictions that up to half the remaining forces could be killed, the evacuations were so well planned that there were minimal casualties, which was a relief to the hospital staff who had been prepared for casualties. With the end of the Gallipoli campaign, the hospitals on Lemnos were disbanded.

On 25th July 1917, RMS Mooltan left Malta en route for Marseilles with the Messageries Maritimes steamer Lotus and two escorting Japanese destroyers, Kusunoki and Ume.

The following evening she was torpedoed, forward on the starboard side at 1915 hrs by the German submarine UC27, (in fact been UC27's first target). All but two of the 554 aboard had been taken off by 2015hrs, when RMS Mooltan was abandoned, about 100 miles south of Sardinia, to be sunk two hours later by a second torpedo.

The importance of these two souvenir pieces are the links with the transportation of Australian nurses to the war theatre and its use at Gallipoli and its loss in the Mediterranean Sea while on service.

$1,000

Taken from "Shackleton's Voyage by Donald Barr CHIDSEY, Tandem Books 1967. November 20th 1820 in the Pacific three of the four whale boats of the Essex of Nantucket put out to harpoon whales. One of the boats was badly damaged by a tail-swipe and turned back to the ship. The ship itself was then attacked head-on by an infuriated 85 foot Sperm Whale, which charged it twice at great speed and made two gaping holes in the hull. The ship started to sink. In a matter of minutes the men aboard got the fourth launched under the command of the mate Owen Chase. The other two boats returning from the chase with the Captain and nineteen crewmen got what little supplies off the Essex - 600lbs of bread and 65 gallons of water - before she sunk utterly. They then started for the mainland more than 1000 miles away. They had navigating instruments and eventually made it, though their sufferings were acute. The incident is notable because it gave Hermann Melville the idea for "Moby Dick". He undoubtedly read Chase's thrilling first hand report.

Together with business card from Tyrrell's Antiques - Books - Curios, at 281 George Street, Sydney, on the reverse is written 'Robert Louis Stevenson to his Mother'. This business is where the letter was originally sourced. James Tyrrell died in 1961. The family continued the city store until relocating to Crows Nest in 1971.

The letter reads as follows (note that some words are difficult to read).

'I went to Manu'a on the Curacoa and had a splendid excursion. Manu'a is very interesting, and a pretty place. The Curacoas and I enjoyed it all extremely. I saw Metu (?) there in a white lava-lava, such a big, little man! His wife Tainlu (?) - you remember her - wept on beholding the countenance of Tusitala. The Queen lives in a little European house on the beach and never goes out of it without a man blowing a (?) before her! She says it is mighty dull; but it is pretty to see all these long legged native chiefs presided (?) a little half-caste girl in a pink dress. No word of the furniture yet! Tell Graham we are all ready to eat him when he comes. Lord, Lord, what a volley of talking (?) is going to be in the lordly halls of Vailima.

Salute the Sharpes for me.

Ever your affectionate son.

R.L.Stevenson'

Tusitala (Teller of Tales) was the name given to Robert Louis Stevenson by the Samoans. In 1894, the same year that he died, he visited the Manu'a Islands for two days on board the British ship, HMS Curacoa. While there he stayed in a guest house belonging to Queen Matelita and he also met the Queen at her residence on Ta'u. He related that whenever she leaves the house an able-bodied native must walk in front of her and blow the conch shell continuously until she enters another house. She died on 29 October 1895 at the age of 22. This was nearly a year after Stevenson died on 3 December 1894 at the age of 44. His residence at Vailima, Samoa is now the Robert Louis Stevenson Museum.

The following was published in The Sydney Morning Herald on Monday 23 September 1901, page 8.

'DEATH OF MR. G. COLQUHOUN, CROWN SOLICITOR.

On Saturday last Mr George Colquhoun, Crown Solicitor, died at his residence, Braeside, Kogarah, after a somewhat protracted illness, and thus passed away one of the most prominent and respected members of the legal profession. Mr Colquhoun was in his 72nd year at the time of his death, and several phases of his career in New South Wales are of peculiar interest. Deceased was born on April 23, 1835 at Woolwich, county of Kent (England), and was the eldest son of the late James Colquhoun, solicitor, of the same town. Mr Colquhoun was educated at Dr Smithers' College, at Greenwich (England), and at the age of 16 he was articled to his father, and passed his final examination at the age of 21, being the youngest solicitor on the English roll when he was admitted.

After working in his father's office for two years longer, he decided to try his fortune in Australia. He left England in 1853, and after one of the prolonged voyages of those days, lasting 153 days, he arrived in Sydney, and entered the service of the Bank of Australasia. Here he remained for two years, and was then admitted to the roll of solicitors of New South Wales. In the same year he went up to Bathurst where he managed the business of Mr. S. P. Sargeant, solicitor, of that city, for two years, when he started practice on his own account; but about 1801, when Forbes came into prominence as the centre of a gold bearing district, he removed his business to that town. A very large population had assembled on the headland; and, as may be remembered, bushranging was rife. On one occasion Mr. Colquhoun successfully defended Ben Hall from a charge of cattle-stealing preferred against him at the instance of Sir Frederick Pottinger, and while he was still a resident of Forbes an attack was made upon Mr Campbell's residence by bushrangers, and O'Malley, a well-known member of the gang, was shot. During the encounter Mr. Campbell displayed so much heroism that a public testimonial was decided upon, and Mr. Colquhoun took an active part in the movement for collecting the necessary funds. While driving about Forbes on this mission he met with an accident which resulted in a fracture of the left ankle. This necessitated a tedious and painful journey to Sydney by coach, lasting five days, and when he arrived here it was found necessary to amputate the foot.

This untoward incident compelled him to give up a lucrative practice at Forbes, and after carrying on his profession in the metropolis for a short time he went up to Maitland and started business. He remained there until 1876, and then returned to Sydney as managing clerk for Messrs. Want, Johnson and Want (now Messrs. Minter, Simpson and Co.). After some years in that office deceased, at the instance of the late Sir George Wigram Allen, accepted the appointment of manager of the business of Messrs. Allen and Allen (now Messrs. Allen, Allen and Hemsley) and on the death of Sir George, Mr. Colquhoun was taken into partnership. He continued an active member of that firm until 1861, when the position of Crown Solicitor was offered to and accepted by him, in succession to Mr. E. A. Smith, who had resigned. This responsible and onerous post Mr Colquhoun held until a short time prior to his death, when at his own request, he was retired on the ground of ill-health.

Deceased was well known as a sound lawyer and a deep student of literature. At the time of his death his general library consisted of between 2000 and 3000 volumes, and he had one of the best private law libraries in Sydney. He was of a genial and generous disposition, and he readily gave the assistance of his long experience and knowledge to the younger members of his profession in any matters where they required advice. Mr Colquhoun was a gentleman of musical tastes, his favourite instruments being the cello and flute, on which latter instrument he once performed before the late Queen at Exeter Hall. Mr. Colquhoun leaves a widow, three sons, and two daughters. The funeral will leave the Redfern railway station (A platform) for the Waverley Cemetery at 2.35 p.m. to-day, on the arrival of the train from Kogarah.'

On 1 May 1837 John Allsworth was appointed as one of two constables to work with the NSW Constabulary, operating from the Port Phillip, then a district of NSW, to identify or detect runaways from Van Diemen's Land as they knew all the prisoners. Allsworth was the holder of a conditional pardon and the question arose as to whether he could work outside of Van Diemen's Land. Ultimately it was ruled that the pardon would continue to be operational, however in 1838 he resigned his posting and returned to policing duties in Van Diemen's Land.

'Mr John Brickhill, eldest son of Mr John Brickhill of the Launceston Post Office Department, died at his residence York-street west, on the 6th inst., at the early age of 32 years. The deceased young man has been for more than half the period of his life clerk in the office of Messrs. Douglas and Collins, and prior to that firm being in existence he was clerk to Mr Douglas. He has been secretary to the Fire Brigade No. 1 (red), for many years a member of the Cornwall Lodge of Odd Fellows, and latterly a member of the order of Good Templars. He was an active, intelligent, useful young man, highly respected by the community in which he resided all his life. His remains were interred on the 10th inst., in the Mulgrave Square Cemetery, and the funeral cortege was one of the largest we have seen in Launceston.'

'DEATH OF WILLIAM JOHNSTONE, ESQ.

We regret to have to record the death of William Johnstone, Esq., at his residence Beulah, High-street, yesterday morning, aged 53 years. The sad event will no doubt take many by surprise, for only a week before the deceased gentleman was going about his business as usual. It seems he got a chill whilst travelling by rail to the Westbury Show on Wednesday, 22nd instant, and by the time he reached home he was evidently - very unwell.

- Congestion of the liver and lungs set in, but no serious apprehensions were entertained until Sunday. From that time he grew rapidly worse, and expired at a quarter to one o'clock yesterday morning. Mr Johnstone was for many years a resident of Launceston. We believe he arrived here in the year 1841, and after acquiring the necessary local knowledge he started on his own account as a merchant in 1844. He was a shrewd man of business, honorable and liberal in his transactions, and was esteemed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Though never taking any very prominent part in political or social matters, he ever evinced considerable interest in any thing likely to promote the welfare of the colony, and there were few movements tending to that end which he did not aid in a quiet and unostentatious manner, while his benevolence partook of the same characteristics. There is no doubt he will be greatly missed in this community. Mr Johnstone has acted for many years as one of the Auditors of the Launceston Municipality. He leaves a widow and a large family to mourn his untimely loss.
- The esteem in which the deceased gentleman was held by his fellow townsmen was exhibited yesterday by many of the shops and other business establishments in town partially closing their shutters; the flags at the Town Hall and the vessels now in harbor were also hoisted halfmast. The funeral takes place to-morrow (Friday) afternoon.'
