Robert Lewis John Ellery CMG, FRS was an English-Australian astronomer and public servant who served as Victorian government astronomer for 42 years. Born in Cranleigh, Surrey, England on 14 July 1827 Ellery qualified as a medical practitioner but his main focus was on astronomy. He came to Victoria in 1851 attracted by the discovery of gold. In 1853 the Victorian government established an astronomical observatory and as Ellery had already established a reputation as an astronomer he was placed in charge of the facility.

In addition to his astronomical work, Ellery was one of the founders of the Royal Society of Victoria and its president from 1866 to 1884. In 1882 he became a trustee of the public library, museums and National Gallery of Victoria. He was also a member of the council of the University of Melbourne for many years. In 1873 he organised the Victorian Torpedo Corps and later the Submarine Mining Engineers and was in command until 1889 when he retired with the rank of lieutenant colonel. In 1900 he was elected president of the Australasian Association for the Advancement of Science. He was also a keen apiarist and in 1885 he was the first president of the Victorian Beekeepers' Club and editor of the Australian Beekeepers' Journal.

Ellery was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society, London in 1873, created a CMG in 1889 and was awarded the Clarke Medal by the Royal Society of New South Wales in 1889. Mount Ellery in Antarctica was named in his honour in 1886. Robert Lewis John Ellery CMG, FRS died on 14 January 1908.

An article in The Queenslander newspaper on Saturday 12 September 1896 on page 501 reads as follows.

Signor Giuseppe Truda is a native of Italy, having been born at Viggiano, in the Neapolitan territory, on 5th August, 1869. At the age of 9 he began his musical education at the Conservatorio of Salerno. At the age of 14 he was playing first violin in the Salerno Theatre, and after another year went to England, where he travelled "to earn my living as well as I could," to use his own picturesque form of speech.

After about twelve months spent in that way, he came out to Australia, under engagement with the opera company piloted by Martin Simonsen, who was the Carl Rosa of Australasia in those days. Playing alternately under Simonsen, Caron, and Adzon, he remained in Australia about three years, when he returned for a short time to his native land. Came back to Australia, where he first "knocked about a bit," ultimately accepting another offer to play with the Simonsen Opera Company. But unsatisfied ambition to excel in his art impelled him once more to return to Naples, where for two years in the Reggio Conservatorio he studied under Dvorak, with whom he still keeps up epistolary communication. "Like a bad penny"-his own words-he once more turned up, about six years ago, in Australia in general and Brisbane in particular, and here his habitat has remained ever since. A visit to the Signor's home on Wickham-terrace, if you are lucky enough to find him free of pupils, will be an hour most agreeably spent. You will find, as the writer of this did on such an occasion, that, like all true artists, he is supremely happy in his art. "People like me", he will say, are not rich; we do not go into Parliament or get handles to our names, but we are far happier than they. Look at me! I have worked and suffered, and I can work and suffer still if you give me this-he is speaking with the beloved violin in hand all the time-" Ecco! and he touches a string or two that lights up his eyes and entrances his hearer", untwisting all the chains that tie the hidden soul of harmony.

What do you think of the future of good music in Queensland? he is asked. "I am very hopeful of it," answers the Signor, "from one point of view, that is, not from another. Pupils, of the violin especially, are too much in a hurry to become players. Violin teaching differs from piano tuition in this, that youthful fiddlers when they have got just the amount of knowledge which is dangerous think they know as much as their master, knock off study, and join an orchestra. On the other hand, audiences are becoming more and more appreciative of good music, and by consequence less tolerant of the bad, trashy kind. Formerly, I remember, I could play Beethoven, Mozart, or Mendelssohn all night, and they might encore me while sucking oranges because 'it is Truda', but if for the encore I gave them 'The Mocking Bird' or some rubbish like that, they would yell their applause until the orange juice would nearly choke 'em. Now it is getting different, and 'The Mocking Bird kind of thing is not quite as popular.'

It will gladden all lovers of the violin as it should be played to learn that Signor Truda's fixed intention is to make Brisbane his home for the rest of his life. He likes the place and the people, and they manifestly like him.

William Longworth, was one of Australia's greatest swimmers. During his time he was the holder of every freestyle State and Australian championship title. Born on 26 September 1892 at Singleton, NSW and dying at Wahroonga, NSW on 10 October 1969 he competed for Australasia in the 1912 Summer Olympics. He attended Sydney Grammar School and excelled in athletics, swimming and rugby union. In 1913, after a sensational race, retained his title as 100yds State champion, and also won the half-mile championship in decisive style. Longworth's success was not wholly expected, for the reason that it was not long since he recovered from a severe illness. But his performances showed that he was as well as probably ever he was- the same Invincible "Bill". During 1915 he enlisted in the AIF and served in France from November as a sergeant with the Anzac Entrenchment Battalion. He also represented the AIF in swimming.

The Sydney Savage Club, formed in 1934, was based on the Savage Club in London. The name is derived from Richard Savage (1697-1743), the English poet. It has social and cultural objects and its meetings were called corroborees. Its logo was Koorra Na Boon, which was also the name of its journal. It operates today with the aim of sponsoring multiple events in the City of Sydney Eisteddfod and providing encouragement to young performers in the fields of music, arts and theatre.

Vernon Lisle studied violin and piano in his youth and also studied engineering at Melbourne's Swinburne College. When he won a prestigious singing scholarship he abandoned his engineering studies to pursue a career in music. At university he sang professionally, conducted choirs and composed music. After university he had several years as a conductor and briefly was the manager of a music store.

He also performed in vaudeville, musical comedy and opera but when World War II started he joined the RAAF where he served in air intelligence. After the war ended he devoted much of his career to broadcasting clocking up 25 years at 2KO Newcastle, the ABC and 2UW Sydney as programme and studio manager.

He had an interesting career being the first person to sing on radio (3LO Melbourne), was the founder of Carols By Candlelight being the compere of the event for 14 years. He was also the President of the Fellowship of Australian Composers and as such was instrumental in raising private funding to enable the 1985 Asian Composers League Conference to be held in Australia. In 1991 he was awarded the Medal of the Order of Australia for his services to music. He was also vice president of the Sydney Savage Club and in 1951 wrote the song, 'Square Dance By The Billabong'. Vernon Lisle died in February 1991.
