

AUSTRALIAN BANKNOTES

PRIVATE BANK ISSUES

Australia's first banknote. The only known example and of the highest historical importance.

2800*

Bank of New South Wales, ten shillings, Sydney, 8 April 1817, No.55, imprint S. Clayton Sculptor, payable to J.Lee or bearer, signed E.S.Hall Cashier, Entd. R. Campbell Jun. Signed by directors J.Harris and R.Jenkins (MVR type 1a), tablet on back with legend. Printed at the office of the Sydney Gazette. Three vertical folds, perforations on centre-fold otherwise fine and clear, excessively rare if not unique, the ultimate Australian banknote icon.

$125,000

The unassuming appearance of this note belies its vast significance. Recently brought to light from a private Scottish collection, it was issued the day the Bank of New South Wales opened in 1817 and is Australia's oldest known banknote. The story behind the note follows the establishment of Australia's first bank and regulated currency issue.

Lieutenant-Colonel Lachlan Macquarie, upon arrival in Sydney at the end of 1809, was confronted with a colony in crisis. Those who arrived with the First Fleet in 1788, with only two years' provisions and without knowledge of Australian agricultural conditions, had nearly starved. Compounding the problem of basic survival was the lack of a stable local monetary system. A provisional local currency had evolved including promissory notes that were easily forged and often dishonoured, a mixture of overseas coins brought to the colony by visiting ships, and anything that could be used for barter, especially rum. As the new governor, Macquarie was given extensive powers to reshape the colony, but despite this, his first request to London to establish a bank was rejected. In 1812, to alleviate the shortage of currency, he imported £10,000 in Spanish coins from India and manufactured the famed holey dollars and dumps. These efforts did little to improve the situation. The import was insufficient to meet the needs of the colony and the other prevalent practices continued. So efforts to establish a bank were renewed.

In 1816, Macquarie revived the plan, this time pushing ahead without approval from London. Upmost in his mind were the needs of the colony for a stable and secure currency to facilitate commerce and trade. At a meeting with 13 selected citizens in the Judge Advocate's chambers it was agreed that a bank would be established. On 22 March 1817, the charter for the first bank in Australia signed by Governor Macquarie, was delivered to the banks President, prompting the Sydney Gazette, voicing the support of the community, to hail the move as a 'great colonial undertaking'.

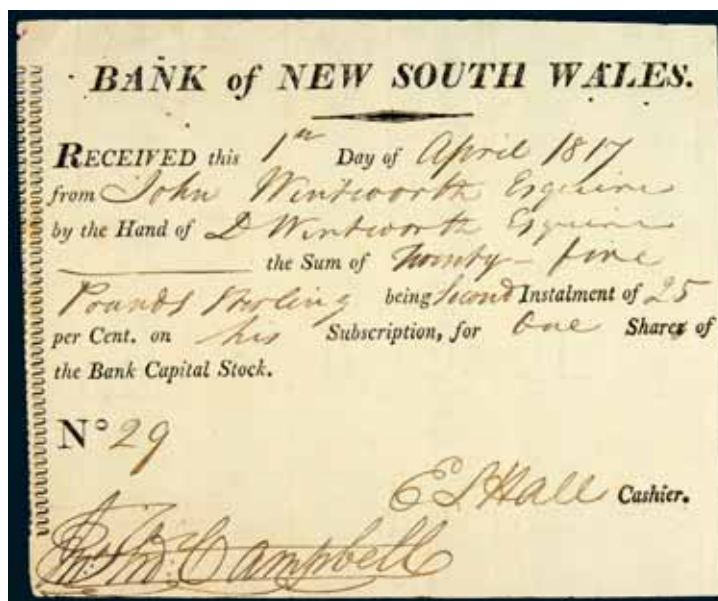

Thirty-nine respondents offered to invest a total £5,000 of the £20,000 allotment after an invitation to subscribe was published in the Sydney Gazette on 5 December 1816. With the capital groundwork laid, prospective subscribers then approved a committee of fifteen to draft a corporate constitution of the bank, which was completed on 29 January 1817 and submitted to a General Meeting on 7 February. Forty-nine of fifty regulations were unanimously adopted and the remaining rule was amended. One particular rule stipulated the notes to be issued; two shillings & sixpence, five shillings, ten shillings, one pound and five pounds, signed by two directors and the cashier, and countersigned by the principal bookkeeper. The seven elected directors were D'Arcy Wentworth, John Harris, Robert Jenkins, Thomas Wylde, Alexander Riley, William Redfern and John Thomas Campbell (President and Chairman). The first meeting of directors took place on 12 February where, among other things, it was decided to appoint an engraver.

Samuel Clayton, the colony's first engraver, was appointed to produce plates for the new banknotes. As a measure against forgery and until banknote paper arrived from England in 1820, the back of each note was to be inscribed with a legend by a letterpress unique to the colony. The legend on the note in question is previously unrecorded and reads 'When we cease to render strict and impartial Justice in the Administration of the Affairs of the Bank, as it regards the Public on one hand, and the Proprietors on the other, be our Names and Characters branded in perpetual Infamy'. This security measure had been established earlier in 1815 when the Sydney Gazette also printed the Police Fund notes, of which only unissued forms now exist. The verse was, however, in latin from Cicero. The left margin device used on the Police Fund notes is virtually identical with this note, showing wavy lines interspersed with stars, the guiding light to the colony. The border device on the back is also identical with that on the Police Fund notes.

The final major decision regarded the place of business. A committee of three directors, including Jenkins, inspected premises offered by tender. On 6 March they selected the house of Mrs Mary Reibey in Macquarie Place with terms of a two year lease at a rental of £150 per annum.

On 8 April 1817 the Bank of New South Wales opened for business at 10am. One hundred ten shillings notes were issued on the first day. In accordance with a decision recorded in the bank's minutes of that day, all notes were made payable to 'J. Lee or bearer'. It should be noted that John Lee is listed in the Colonial Secretary Index 1788-1825 as being rewarded from the Police Fund for £10-0-0 on 10 February 1816 as 'a reward for himself...[for] catching two horses belonging to Assistant Surgeon Redfern'. William Redfern was a founding director of the bank (see above).

It was two years before Macquarie replied to the advice from London, by which time the bank was a proven success, forcing it in 1822 to move to new and larger premises on George Street. With a vision of the future, faith in the colony and the support of the public, Macquarie had established a great Australian enterprise, confident it would provide the solution to the currency problem in the colony. After concluding his service as governor, Macquarie regarded the Bank of New South Wales as his chief financial accomplishment, referring to it in a letter to Lord Bathurst as 'the saving of the colony from ruin'. Indeed, the immediate impact of the new bank extended beyond New South Wales - The Bank of Van Diemen's Land was modelled after the original charter and opened in 1824. Today the Bank of New South Wales continues operation after merging with the Commercial Bank of Australia Limited on 1 October 1982, becoming Westpac Banking Corporation.

The Hentys. Six months before their arrival at the Swan River on the Warrior in March 1830, Stephen, James and John, sons of Thomas Henty, a Sussex merino wool breeder and banker of middling wealth, had on 12 October 1829 landed from their chartered ship the Caroline. Thomas, with seven sons and one daughter, saw the promise of free land grants proportionate to the 'wealth' he would bring with him; servants, labourers, artisans and their families – an entourage exceeding thirty. The Henty brothers, like the Bussells and their colleagues six months later, found the Governor had made all the grants he intended for the foreseeable future. Malloy stayed in Augusta. Bussell moved further north and it is from his holdings there that the town of Busselton came into being.

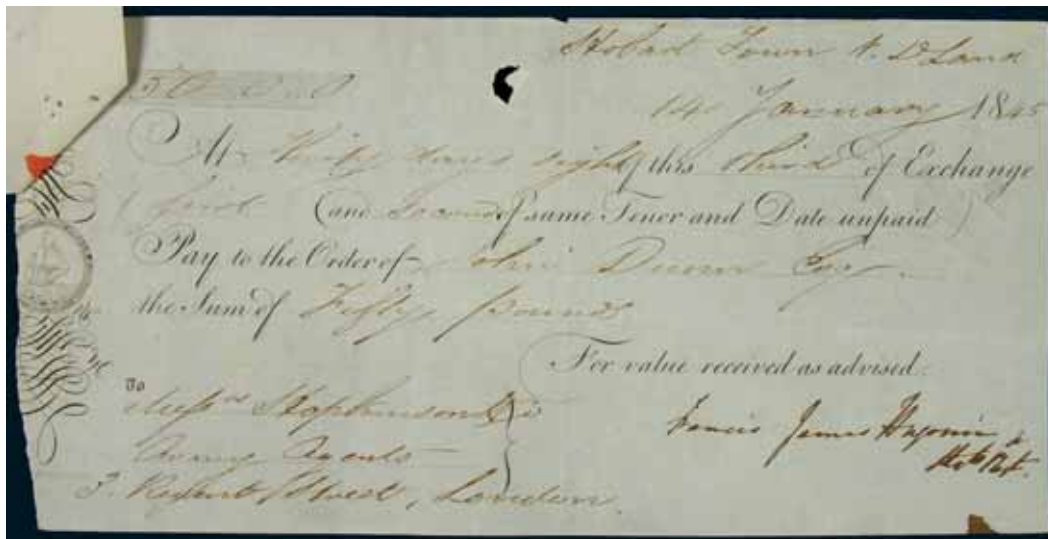

Edward set up trade store at Fremantle until he could plan the future. The land around King Georges Sound was checked; a quasi military outpost had been constructed to deter possible French designs, however it was unsuitable. The Hentys migrated again, this time to northern Tasmania, and again they were thwarted again – there were no grants of suitable land.

In 1832 Thomas and the family migrated and moved to Launceston but not until Thomas called in at the Swan to vet the quality of the land he may have owned. He was not impressed. The family; Thomas and his wife Jane (26), Charles [the banker], William [the solicitor, who remained in England], Edward [the businessman], Stephen [pastoralist and trader] and Frank and John [the pastoralists]. In the interim a small schooner, the Thistle, was purchased by James in view of Stephen being active in trading, whaling and sealing. The family enterprise, now Henty & Co., expanded to Augusta, King Georges Sound, The Vasse and on at least one occasion as far as New Zealand. Always looking for suitable land, Edward noted on one trip a group of whalers and sealers settled at Portland Bay. The land was perfect. It was unsettled and ripe for the taking. The only government was in far away Sydney, so they squatted.

It took over a decade for the Government and the Hentys to reach a compromise regarding the ownership of the Portland Bay holdings, Merino Downs, Muntham, Sandford and Connells's Run. In mid-1835 Edward bought a schooner, the Sally Anne; this was hired by the government to run a monthly trading service between the Western ports and Launceston. This operated until late-1835. It was during this period that the Bussell – Henty note was issued, 14th November 1835. From here the Henty Dynasty grew in stature and status making major contributions to the development of Victoria and northern Tasmania.

A contemporary wrote of Stephen Henty: 'trustworthy, effective man of business – the boldest of the brothers... more balanced than Edward – stronger than William – more flexible than James – wider interests than Francis.' Of Frances, Stephen's wife, he said: 'a nonagenarian... a historic personage.'

James P. Poynter was the first manager of the Bank of Australasia.

Ex W.J.D. Mira Collection. Similar to lots 2772, 2774 (Sale 77), this is the only example we have seen on behalf of the military.

John Dunn (1790-1861), merchant and banker, was born in Scotland, son of William Dunn, a weaver. At 16 he was apprenticed to a 'manufacturer of cotton and linen' and his articles were endorsed in 1811. Dunn set sail to Van Diemen's Land in 1821 aboard Hope with wife Catherine née Colville and son John. En route the Hope was wrecked on the Goodwin Sands and the family was transferred to the Heroine, where they joined with Dunn's wealthy mother-in-law. Arriving at Hobart Town on 10 September 1822, the family was granted land on the South Esk River, which Dunn soon sold to set up a shop on the corner of Elizabeth and Bathurst Streets in Hobart. From these premises Dunn gained a reputation of minor notoriety by issuing 'small promissory notes on wretched paper which soon wore out, whereon he would refuse to honour them'.

In 1823 Dunn entered banking as an original shareholder of the Bank of Van Diemen's Land and then in 1828 as a founding director of the Derwent Bank. He left the Derwent Bank and sold his interests in 1829 and opened the Commercial Bank in June 1829 on the site of Gellibrand's old Tasmanian Bank. In 1832 the bank became a joint stock company and hence Dunn ceased to be sole-proprietor, though he maintained his role of managing director until 1857. During his administration the bank was remarkably successful and resulted in Dunn becoming one of the wealthiest and most respected citizens of the colony.

He died at Hobart on 20 January 1861 and was buried at St George's Church of England, Battery Point with the chief justice, Sir Valentine Fleming acting as pallbearer. Dunn's estate was valued at £116,000.

The North Devonshires. Elements of the 11th Regiment of Foot (the North Devonshires), left Chatham, England on the Castle Eden in July 1845 with the remainder following a month later on the Ramiles. After arrival, the regiment was stationed in Sydney for only a short time when it was transferred to Tasmania. A crisis in Sydney occurred when the HQ unit of the 99th mutinied over a 'grog issue' and the C.O. called on the Devonshires in Hobart for assistance. 400 troops under Captain Clark were dispatched immediately for Port Jackson on the barque Tasmania. Arriving in January 1846 the Devonshires found the mutineers had surrendered. They returned to Tasmania on the Java. The colonists in Sydney later petitioned the Governor for the unpopular 99th to be withdrawn and replaced with the 11th. This was carried out and the Devonshires served New South Wales until 1857.

John Glover (1767-1849), landscape painter, arrived in Hobart on 1 April 1831 with his wife and son John Richardson in the Thomas Lawrie. Already an accomplished water-colour painter, he was granted 2560 acres, allocated at Mill's Plains on the northern slope of Ben Lomond. He built his house on the Nile River, naming his property Patterdale. It was here that Glover produced many of his most famous landscapes. Highly prolific, he is remembered as one of the most accomplished painters of the early Australian colonial period.

The Molsons Bank of Montreal (1837-1925) operated briefly as a private bank from 1837-38. Their license to engage in general banking business was turned down in March 1839 because the government felt that the Molsons 'were already being engaged in extensive business as brewers and distillers'. In 1853 the Molsons again entered the banking business under the Free Banking Act. The Molsons Bank operated as a free bank until 1855, when it received a Provincial Charter. The Molsons Bank was acquired by the Bank of Montreal in 1925.

$300

The Bank of Clifton (1859-1863) originated when, on 31 May 1858, a petition was submitted by the Zimmerman Bank asking the Legislative Assembly for amendments to their charter, one of which was a change of name. On 2nd June an act was passed granting the petition and the corporate name was changed to Bank of Clifton. The bank, in reality, was the old Zimmerman Bank, the officers and shareholders remaining nearly identical. In 1859 the stock was transferred to Hubbard & Co of Chicago with control then going to Callaway and Reed. Reed was the major shareholder of The International Bank of Canada at the time of its collapse. The notes issued under the new owners were never meant to be redeemed. The charter was withdrawn by act of the Legislature on 31 August 1862, with Royal Assent given on 15 October 1863.

$600

The Colonial Bank of Canada received its charter from a petition read to the Legislature on 23 April 1856, with Royal assent given on 1 July 1856. After several amendments to the bank's charter in 1857 and 1858, the original shareholders sold their interests. In 1859 the new owners finally opened for business with notes put into circulation. The bank lasted only six months before its failure as a result of a run on it precipitated by the failure of The Interational Bank. An advertisement in the 28 October 1859 issue of the Toronto Globe stated that the bank had suspended operation. The bank's charter was repealed 31 August 1863.

$300

The Farmer's Joint Stock Banking Company (1835-1849) began as a private company and issued its own notes, even after the passage of legislation in 1837 prohibiting note issue without legislative authority. The bank was one of the four private banks authorised to issue notes without legislative authority on an exception basis. Early in the 1840s it quietly wound up, conducting little business apart from the redemption of its circulation. In 1849 the stock was sold to unscrupulous operators who turned the business into a 'wildcat bank', pushing as many of its notes as possible, particularly in the United States. The notes soon fell into disrepute in Toronto and Buffalo, however the bank continued for several more years, issued notes payable at Green Bay Wisconsin before collapsing.

The International Bank of Canada (1858-1859) was originally chartered in 1857 to provide banking service in Cayuga, Ontario. Amendments to the charter in 1858 permitted the bank to open in Toronto, where it operated as a 'wildcat bank' for about a year before failing in October 1859. All of the shares were owned by a Mr Reed when it failed. A man of disreputable character, Reed was also connected with The Bank of Clifton. The International Bank was a small local bank and records of September 1859 indicate notes in circulation of about $119,000. Although it failed in 1859, its charter was not repealed until 1863.

The Bank of Prince Edward Island (1856-1881) was the first bank to be incorporated under Provincial Charter in the colony. The bank was established in 1856, with a capital stock of £30,000 and through conservative management, the bank was prosperous over the next two decades until a change of cashiers in 1876 resulted in large advances being made under false pretenses. The bank became insolvent as a result and in 1881 was liquidated by the courts, with the Bank of Nova Scotia as liquidator.

The Zimmerman Bank (1854-59) began operations under the Free Banking Act of 1850. In 1855 the bank obtained a charter with authorised capital of $1 million. Actual business as a chartered bank did not begin until June of the following year. With the death of the major shareholder, Samuel Zimmerman, 12 March 1857, operations changed overnight with the decision to wind up the bank's affairs as quickly as possible. In early 1858 the Zimmerman Bank made arrangements with the Bank of Upper Canada to take over their note redemption. In 1859 the Zimmerman Bank changed its name to the Bank of Clifton.

$400

The Westmorland Bank (1854-1867) was chartered in 1854 with a capital of $60,000. This bank operated in Bend of the Petitcodiac, subsequently renamed Moncton N.B. There were no other branches. In 1859 a major shipbuilding firm failed and depression struck the area. Debts due to the bank, secured by mortgages on land which could be sold for only a fraction of its former worth, had to be covered from the reserve fund. The bank's position steadily weakened until its failure on 14 March 1867. The capital of the bank was lost, together with an almost equal amount to be covered by the shareholders under the double liability provision in the charter.
