$2,000

Ex Alan Jordan Collection and purchased from Noble Numismatics Sale 67 (lot 1582). The find of early electrum as a foundation deposit in the earliest temple at Ephesus included numerous third staters of this type. It also contained some inscribed electrum coins with the non-Greek name 'Welwet'. Scholars began identifying this name with Alyattes, king of Lydia. Since then this attribution has been thrown into doubt by the more recent discovery of a parallel name, 'Kagi', which does not correspond to any known Lydian king. No one really doubts, however that this prolific coinage was issued by the Lydian royal house. The lion's head was the dynastic badge, and this manner of representation, with the herringbone mane and 'wart' on nose, was introduced into Greek art from Assyria in the second half of the seventh century B.C. It is one of, if not the earliest example of ancient coinage that utilises a design of some type on the obverse. This example is better than most for it is well centred, and free of banker's marks common on this series.

3395*

Bactria, Kingdom of, Diodotos II, (256-239 B.C.), gold stater, (8.27 g), Bactra (Balkh) mint, (Newell suggests c.255-246 B.C.), in name of Antiochus II, obv. diademed head of Diodotus II to right, dotted border, rev. Chron, Pl.VIII, 2; Berlin example of similar weight). Interesting die break on the reverse, slightly off centred on the reverse otherwise very fine, and rare.

$1,200

Ex Alan Jordan Collection and purchased from Noble Numismatics Sale 78 (lot 4930). The reverse die shows a breaking up and a similar example with the same degree of die-breaking occurs on Plate I No.6 (the BM example) in RN 1956. Herzfelder in his extensive study on this coinage knew of 5 examples of this coin from these dies. Many of the examples known are in public collections. For all dies Herzfelder was only able to find 46 coins of this type together with the four from Randazzo make only 50 surviving examples today. The coin is of light weight and occurs on several published examples including another from the same dies in the Berlin Collection (14.14 g).

On the Mediterranean, the city of Marathos (Amrit) lay under the dominion of Arados (Arwad). Both surrendered in about 332 BC to Alexander the Great, whose gold stater this type most clearly imitates. Until fairly recently it has been traditionally assigned to the beginning of Marathos coinage as the type was only known from the Paris de Luynes coin and the Houghton published example. The discovery of some Marathos drachms with a group of coins of Seleukos II has brought the known number up to a handful or so, while it has brought the likely issuance date down to c.230-225 B.C. This new evidence is helpful, but the issue still remains much an enigma. There is an extremely rare tetradrachm, bearing the ethnic, from this period, and it may be that these drachms served as an auxiliary fractional coinage. In about 219 B.C., Marathos gained its independence from Arados and perhaps at this time these events lead to this coinage. The issuance of a high-value silver coin would indicate that Marathos had achieved a great measure of autonomy. But Marathos did not stay long free of the shadow of Arados. In 148 B.C., Arados sacked the city, and Marathos was abandoned soon afterwards.

Ex Alan Jordan Collection and purchased from Noble Numismatics Sale 68 (lot 1890) and previously from Spink America, Sale March 7, 1995 (lot 42 illustrated). The issue with curved wings is much rarer than the straight wing issue. BMC attributes this straight wing type as later than the curved wing and places a date of post 387 B.C. Ephesus used the Rhodian standard, during the fourth century B.C. This magistrate joins a group of new magistrates previously recorded only from the Pixodarus Hoard as noted by Ashton but this example from a plated pair of dies is unlisted by Ashton.

Xanthos has been suggested as the likely mint for this and related issues (See G.K. Jenkins, 'Recent acquisitions of Greek Coins by the British Museum', NC 1959, p.33). However this may be questioned, since this stater and all the related pieces in the SNG Berry, ACNAC Rosen and SNG Von Aulock all fall clearly into the heavy weight classification. Morkholm in 'The Classification of Lycian coins before Alexander the Great' (JNG 1964, pp.65ff), assembled evidence indicating that Xanthos was the home of the light stater and the heavy standard circulated in Central Lycia and that standard cannot be identified with any in use outside Lycia. The letter on the obverse represents a 'kh', the initial letter of the dynast's name. The triskeles on the reverse is a solar symbol and a distinctive Lycian emblem connected with the national deity, Apollo.

Ex Alan Jordan Collection and purchased from Noble Numismatics Sale 76 (lot 3372) and Noble Numismatics Sale 60 (lot 1968). Mazaios ruled Cilicia for 27 years (until just before the Macedonian conquest), and later, under Alexander, he became governor of Babylonia. His surrender of Babylon without resistance probably induced Alexander to appoint him Satrap of Babylon (Alexander was honouring a worthy opponent). His unique position allowed him to issue a new coinage in his name at Babylon. The issue was based on the Attic weight standard (17 g not 10.8 g of the Cilician issue). This soon evolved into the regular coinage of Alexander the Great - that of his most prolific mint, Babylon. The issue and its significance is discussed by Bellinger, Alfred R., Essays on the Coinage of Alexander the Great, (NS No.11), New York, 1963, on pages 56ff., and particularly on pp.60-63. Bellinger sees this coinage as extremely important and as the precursor to the new 'national' coinage at the empire's new capital. Imhoof-Blumer's explanation is that 'Alexander's effort to make the utmost tolerance for the oriental point of view is well known. For the silver, the types of the Cilician satrapal issues of Mazaeus, Baaltars in the guise of Zeus and the lion were retained. On the first silver issue struck at Babylon, Mazaeus continued not only the coin types of the Cilician satrapy, but also the inscriptions, which promulgate the figure of Baaltars still little known in the far east'. Very soon after the issue of this rare coinage Mazaeus was induced to give up these inscriptions.

The heavy issue of this type is many more times rarer than the lighter version of about 15 grams. This rarer intermediate issue follows the modified Alexander the Great tetradrachms that substituted the head of Herakles with the head of Alexander with the scalp of an Indian elephant. This short series was replaced by a new distinctive issue showing a fighting Athena in archaising style hurling a thunderbolt and holding a shield with a weight standard of 17.2 grams. The next issue was a dramatic change in weight to 15.6 grams. This was necessitated by Ptolemy I's financial difficulties and his loss of Syria and Phoenicia to Antigonos I in 312 B.C. It meant abandoning the Attic standard (tetradrachm of 17.2 grams), and replacing it with the Rhodian or Chian standard (tetradrachm of 15.6 grams). This change took place about 312 B.C., at about the time when Alexander IV was murdered by Cassander and it had become no longer necessary for Ptolemy I to retain the same weight system. Zervos in his doctoral thesis records only 63 examples of this variety struck on the heavy standard; a comprehensive record of all known coins from the various museums, sale catalogues and lists.

The recipient of the above main document was an officer in the Dragons of Enghien of the Corps of Conde. Louis de Bourbon Conde, Duke of Enghien was a rallying point for the overthrow of the French government. He indicated his desire to work under the British flag and called the French 'his most cruel enemy'. William Wickham had set up spy networks and was advising d'Enghien on the developments of his counter revolution schemes and the two maintained written communications in their efforts to overthrow the French Government. It is understandable that the document issued by William Wickham should afford the recipient protection because officers in the Army of Conde had been threatened with 'nothing better than the rope and the sword' if they entered France.

William Wickham, Spymaster, has had numerous books written about his role in trying to bring down the French revolutionary government and restore the Bourbons to rule France. Wickham was born at Cottingsley, Yorkshire, England on 11 November 1761 into a well-to-do family. After completing his schooling at Harrow and Christ Church he studied for a law degree at Geneva, Switzerland, graduating in 1786. In 1788 he married a Swiss citizen, Eleonora Madeleine Bertrand, whose father was professor of mathematics at the University of Geneva. He then entered the British diplomatic service and because of his familiarity with Switzerland he was sent there in 1794 as assistant to the British Ambassador and one year later was promoted to that position.

As the Ambassador to Switzerland his primary role was that of spymaster and he established a network in Switzerland and France with the object of planning invasions of France by French Royalists or any other foreign powers that might be able to restore the French monarchy of Louis XVIII who was living in exile.

To achieve his goals, the British Government endowed Wickham with an enormous amount of money, much of this directed to the revolutionary French General Charles Pichegru whom Wickham was trying to woo over so that all of his troops could be placed into the ranks of Louis Joseph, Prince of Conde who maintained an army on the Rhine. When French spies learned of Wickham's spy network France pressured the Swiss Government to remove him so Wickham resigned and returned to England where he was appointed Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department in 1798. However, he returned to Switzerland in 1799 and resumed his spy network for another three years, this time against Emperor Napoleon I. Pressure was once more placed on the Swiss Government so again Wickham resigned and this time returned to England for good.

In 1802 he was appointed to the Privy Council and named Chief Secretary for Ireland, a post he held until 1804. He also served terms as a Member of Parliament from 1802 to 1807. He died on 22 October 1840.

- Tubbo Station, located near Whitton, still stands as one of the richest and largest grazing and sheep properties in the Riverina. It was established during the mid-1800s by a Scottish squatter, John Peter who took it from meagre beginnings to become almost a village within itself, consisting of seven smaller stations, a school, blacksmith and general store for its employees and their families. In 1887 the Tubbo Estate Company, an investment company, purchased Tubbo's 200,000 acre run from John Peter's Estate at a cost of over £361,000 and continued to operate it as predominantly a sheep station. In its first year of operation as a company, Tubbo Estate prided itself on its shearing output, clipping as many as 121,847 sheep, which was the third largest amount shorn in New South Wales. Tubbo Station is recognised for its historical significance since it is one of the few remaining stations that has managed to avoid losing much of its holdings to government subdivision and soldier settlement.

Thomas H.Lempriere was Grand Scribe Ezra from the Inauguration of Supreme Grand Chapter for the years 1889/90 to 1893/94.

All of the certificates are of the type issued by the Grand Lodge of England prior to the formation of the United Grand Lodge of Victoria in 1889. The first two are for Portland Lodge No 841 and the rest are for Portland Lodge No 576. The number change was the result of renumbering under the English Constitution due to a 'Closing the Ranks' in 1863 because of various reasons such as amalgamations and mass movement of people resulting from events like gold rushes.
