Mary II, (1688-1694) Large silver medal struck upon the death of Queen Mary 1694, Diam. 60mm. Edge plain. Obverse, bust of Mary II facing right (wearing tiara with hair bound by strings of pearls) by I. Boskam (Jan Boskam). Reverse, a monument of three graduations, decorated with a detailed scene representing the royal funeral procession. Seated above are the three fates: Clotho presides over Mary's birth, Lachesis with a spindle twists her threads of life, and Atropos with scissors cuts the thread in two when her life has run its course. The legend above is: VNICA DIGNA DEO ("Worthy alone of God") and in small letters below: VIVIT. POST. FVNERA. VIRTVS. MDCXCV ("Virtue survives the tomb") The date of 1695 is based on the old calendar. This is a wonderfully well preserved and very rare medal with a deep blue/grey patination. One is accustomed to seeing the conjoined busts of William (III) and Mary (II) as joint monarchs, and a large silver piece such as this is difficult to obtain. This medal is much rarer than the coins of this celebrated monarch. (MI p. 114, No. 349, Eimer -). Toned, extremely fine or better.

Mary II died quickly and unexpectedly at the relatively young age of 32, at the very end of 1694. In mid-December 1694 she fell ill, and distinct characteristics of smallpox were diagnosed. Within days her death was announced to a shocked nation. Burnet said "Never was such a face of universal sorrow seen in a court or in a town. All people, men and women, young and old could scarce refrain from tears". William III, devoted husband of Mary, continued alone as monarch until his death in 1702 following a serious fall from his horse. From the time that Mary's illness accelerated, the King hardly ever left her bedchamber, and after her death, he was apparently so overcome with grief that he would often collapse. For some weeks he was unable to attend to the affairs of state and did not venture into public places.

George I, (1714-1727), The Order of the Bath revived, 1725, in silver (47mm) by John Crocker, Obverse: A finely detailed laureated portrait of the King facing right, akin to the coinage portraits featured on the (fifth head) guinea and (second head) half guinea. Reverse: A four year old Prince William standing, facing, dressed as a Knight of the Bath. Edge plain, (Eimer 501, MI ii, 463 No.75). A fascinating piece of early 18th century British history, a scarce medal, deeply and attractively toned, extremely fine or better.

William Pitt the Younger was the youngest British Prime Minister on record, assuming the post at the age of 24 in December 1783. He entered Cambridge University at the age of 14 and became a Member of the British Parliament at 22. As Chancellor of the Exchequer or Finance Minister he was a great success, and the Tories and friends of King George III helped propel him to the Premiership. Having resigned in 1801, he returned as Prime Minister in 1804. He gained the support of the Russian, Austrian and Swedish leaders in an attempt to defeat Napoleon Bonaparte, but it is said that the news of Napoleon's victory at Austerlitz in October 1806 contributed to Pitt's premature death aged 45, which was actually as a result of kidney failure caused by excessive drinking. Ironically, though he was a former finance minister, he was heavily in debt upon his death and Parliament raised £40,000 (around $80,000) to pay his creditors. His greatest achievements were reform of the economy and the abolition of slavery.
