THE PATINA COLLECTION OF RETROSPECTIVE PATTERNS

The Imperial Russian Collection. A collection of high relief portraits of the emperors and empresses of Russia. This collection is a set of 25 medallic coin designs that trace the history of the great Russian Empire, which traditionally began during the reign of Peter the Great (1682-1725) and ended with the death of Czar Nicholas II in 1917. The portraits are reproduced from the works of Russia's greatest 18th and 19th century numismatic engravers. All medals are 38.6mm in diameter and have a plain edge.

Australia, William IV, pattern crown set 1830, as a collection of 10 trial coins made at the start of the Patina retro pattern series by INA Ltd to test dies and the use of specific metals, one of only ten sets made. FDC. (10)

$200

All coins have the obverse design of William Wyon's classic portrait of King William facing right, coupled with a plain reverse inscribed with the word 'MODEL' placed horizontally across the diameter. The other pieces have the crown enclosed within a wreath, SYDNEY above and NEW SOUTH WALES below, with the date 1830. The collection consists of 2 pieces (obv. and rev.) in proof .925 sterling silver, 2 pieces (obv. and rev.) in piedfort copper, 2 pieces (obv. and rev.) in bright pewter, 2 pieces (obv. and rev.) in golden alloy, and 2 pieces (obv. and rev.) in nickel silver.

Australia, Queen Victoria, pattern crown set, 1887, as a collection of 10 trial coins made at the start of the Patina retro pattern series by INA Ltd to test dies and the use of specific metals, one of only ten sets made. FDC. (10)

$200

All coins have Joseph Edgar Boehm's classic 'Jubilee' portrait of the Queen facing left, coupled with a plain reverse inscribed with the word 'MODEL' placed horizontally across the diameter. The other pieces have a design which features a map of Australia, crowned, with a standing kangaroo and emu. The design is based on Bonomi's patterns, and demonstrates how Bonomi's incuse designs could have looked on colonial coinage. The collection consists of 2 pieces (obv. and rev.) in proof .925 sterling silver, 2 pieces (obv. and rev.) in piedfort copper, 2 pieces (obv. and rev.) in bright pewter, 2 pieces (obv. and rev.) in golden alloy, and 2 pieces (obv. and rev.) in nickel silver.

This and the following four lots form a part of a very small number of experimental strikings from a pair of Donald R. Golder 'Patina' dies, made some time ago, but which were never used to produce any Edward VIII pattern coins in quantity. The portrait of Edward VIII (based on Pistrucci's large head of George III on the GB pattern crown (ref. ESC 234) was considered too large, and a smaller version was eventually used in the series. Nevertheless, this large portrait is interesting. The Pistrucci style reverse design of St George and the dragon featured here was also never used for the 'Patina' series of production (retro) patterns.

From a total mintage of only 975 pieces of each metal. Anna was the niece of Peter the Great and after the death of Peter II the Russian Supreme Council made her Empress. She soon became autocratic, and used the feared security police to intimidate those who opposed her. Anna did however continue Peter's policy of westernisation and encouraged science and the arts.

Anna (Ivanovna), (1730 - 1740), 1730 dated Medal or 'Accession Rouble' comprising five pieces struck to proof quality in .925 sterling silver. Approximate weight 26 grams each piece, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (5)

$100

From a total mintage of only 180 pieces of each metal.

Ivan VI, (1740 - 1741), 1741 dated Medal or Pattern Rouble' comprising 50 medals or pattern roubles in golden alloy, 50 medals or pattern roubles in polished pewter and 50 medals or pattern roubles in high grade copper, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (150)

From a total mintage of only 975 pieces of each metal. Ivan's grand-aunt Empress Anna adopted the eight week old Ivan and declared him her successor a few days before her death. In late 1740 Elizabeth Petrovna seized power and imprisoned Ivan in a series of fortified buildings, where he remained long after her death. In July 1764 a plan to free him (hatched by a sub-lieutenant of his guards) failed and led to his murder.

Peter III, (1762), 1762 dated Medal or 'Memorial Rouble' comprising 50 medals or pattern roubles in golden alloy, 50 medals or pattern roubles in polished pewter and 50 medals or pattern roubles in high grade copper, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (150)

From a total mintage of only 975 pieces of each metal. Son of Karl-Friedrich, Duke of Holstein and Anna Petrovna, daughter of Peter the Great, Peter was chosen by Elizabeth as her heir. After becoming Czar in 1762 Peter was viewed as weak when he brokered an unpopular peace with Prussia. Peter's wife Catherine feared he was about to divorce her so she seized power. He was later murdered.

Peter III, 1762 dated Medal or 'Memorial Rouble' comprising five pieces struck to proof quality in .925 sterling silver. Approximate weight 26 grams each piece, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (5)

Elizabeth (Petrovna), (1741 - 1762), 1741 dated Medal or 'Accession Rouble' comprising 50 medals or pattern roubles in golden alloy, 50 medals or pattern roubles in polished pewter and 50 medals or pattern roubles in high grade copper, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (150)

From a total mintage of only 975 pieces of each metal. Elizabeth, granddaughter of Peter the Great, courted the support of the nobles and Russian army regiments before seizing the throne in 1741. She was indolent, indulgent and patronised the nobility, but her court was the most dazzling in Europe and she was widely respected by European leaders.

Elizabeth (Petrovna), (1741 - 1762), 1741 dated Medal or 'Accession Rouble' comprising five pieces struck to proof quality in .925 sterling silver. Approximate weight 26 grams each piece, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (5)

Catherine II, (The Great), (1762 - 1796), 1762 dated Medal or 'Accession Rouble' comprising 50 medals or pattern roubles in golden alloy, 50 medals or pattern roubles in polished pewter and 50 medals or pattern roubles in high grade copper, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (150)

From a total mintage of only 875 pieces of each metal. At the age of 14 Catherine came to Russia as the bride of the heir to the throne Peter Feodorovich and they married in 1745. Bright, industrious, highly intelligent and strong willed, she quickly mastered the Russian language and began even correspondence with Voltaire. She overthrew her unpopular husband and started one of the most prosperous periods in Russian history.

Catherine II (The Great), (1762 - 1796), 1796 dated Medal or 'Memorial Rouble' comprising five pieces struck to proof quality in .925 sterling silver. Approximate weight 26 grams each piece, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (5)

(150)

From a total mintage of only 875 pieces of each metal. Catherine's patronage furthered the evolution of the arts in Russia. She imported classical and European influences which inspired the Russian enlightenment and her foreign policy conquests made Russia dominant in south eastern Europe. She suffered a stroke in 1796 and died before regaining consciousness.

Paul I, (1796 - 1801), 1797 dated Medal or 'Coronation Rouble' comprising 50 medals or pattern roubles in golden alloy, 50 medals or pattern roubles in polished pewter and 50 medals or pattern roubles in high grade copper, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (150)

$300

From a total mintage of only 875 pieces of each metal. The new Czar was morbidly suspicious of democracy and anything western European. He censored correspondence with foreigners, and banned the importation of books. His foreign policy was a series of contradictions where he suddenly changed plans, probably acting after fits of pique!

Catherine II (The Great), (1762 - 1796), 1762 dated Medal or 'Accession Rouble' comprising five pieces struck to proof quality in .925 sterling silver. Approximate weight 26 grams each piece, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (5)

Paul I, (1796 - 1801), 1801 dated Medal or 'Memorial Rouble' comprising 50 medals or pattern roubles in golden alloy, 50 medals or pattern roubles in polished pewter and 50 medals or pattern roubles in high grade copper, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (150)

From a total mintage of only 875 pieces of each metal. Paul was obsessed with the notion that he would be assassinated, and rightly so! In March 1801 he was murdered in his bedroom by a band of dismissed army officers. Some see Paul as an eccentric and delusional ruler, but others view him as a man of high morals who fought corruption in the state.

Paul I, (1796 - 1801), 1796 dated Medal or 'Accession Rouble' comprising 50 medals or pattern roubles in golden alloy, 50 medals or pattern roubles in polished pewter and 50 medals or pattern roubles in high grade copper, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (150)

$300

From a total mintage of only 875 pieces of each metal. Paul was the son of Catherine II and Peter but he often clashed with his mother. He could be generous or vindictive, and after he became Emperor in 1796 he reversed many of his mother's more enlightened policies.

Paul I, (1796 - 1801), 1801 dated Medal or 'Memorial Rouble' comprising five pieces struck to proof quality in .925 sterling silver. Approximate weight 26 grams each piece, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (5)

Alexander I, (1801 - 1825), 1801 dated Medal or 'Accession Rouble' comprising 50 medals or pattern roubles in golden alloy, 50 medals or pattern roubles in polished pewter and 50 medals or pattern roubles in high grade copper, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (150)

From a total mintage of only 875 pieces of each metal. The son of Paul I, Alexander was young, energetic and popular, and the first half of his reign was marked by liberal internal policies. Youthful idealism was the order of the day, and the reformer Michael Speransky became a close adviser to the new Czar. By 1812, however, grave problems in Europe began to weigh, and Speransky was ousted by his rivals who saw his reforms as too ambitious for a conservative nation.

Alexander I, (1801 - 1825), 1801 dated Medal or 'Accession Rouble' comprising five pieces struck to proof quality in .925 sterling silver. Approximate weight 26 grams each piece, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (5)

$100

From a total mintage of only 170 pieces of each metal.

Alexander I, (1801 - 1825), 1801 dated Medal or 'Military Rouble' comprising 50 medals or pattern roubles in golden alloy, 50 medals or pattern roubles in polished pewter and 50 medals or pattern roubles in high grade copper, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (150)

$300

From a total mintage of only 450 pieces of each metal. Alexander began to view himself as a military leader and he had several early foreign policy successes. Under his rule Russia acquired Finland and parts of Poland. He made peace with Britain, Prussia and the Holy Roman Empire, but he was distrustful of Napoleon Bonaparte whom he first saw as an ally, and later as an enemy who invaded Russia in 1812.

Alexander I, (1801 - 1825), 1808 dated Medal or 'Military Rouble' comprising 50 medals or pattern roubles in golden alloy, 50 medals or pattern roubles in polished pewter and 50 medals or pattern roubles in high grade copper, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (150)

$300

From a total mintage of only 650 pieces of each metal. Eventually, Alexander turned his energies towards the defeat of Napoleon, and despite his successes, the affairs of state seemed to take their toll. There was a transition from the young idealist and European peacemaker to a more orthodox Russian Czar, determined to take the interests of his own people and of his religion into his own hands.

$300

From a total mintage of only 875 pieces of each metal. Alexander remains one of Russia's most interesting and complex rulers, and his last days are shrouded in mystery. Late in 1825 he travelled to southern Russia but contracted typhus and died. His sudden death sparked rumours that he had renounced the throne and fled. The British ambassador vowed he had 'seen' Alexander boarding a ship, though others said he became a monk. In 1925 the Soviets opened Alexander's tomb and it was empty!

Alexander I, (1801 - 1825), 1825 dated Medal or 'Memorial Rouble' comprising five pieces struck to proof quality in .925 sterling silver. Approximate weight 26 grams each piece, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (5)

3742*

Constantine, (1825), 1825 dated Medal or 'Pattern Rouble' comprising 50 medals or pattern roubles in golden alloy, 50 medals or pattern roubles in high grade copper, and 50 in nickel silver, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (150)

$300

From a total mintage of only 975 pieces of each metal. Constantine was a Russian duke and younger brother of Alexander I. On the sudden death of Alexander he was next in line for succession. However, he had secretly renounced the claim in favour of Nicholas, in return for Alexander's permission to divorce his first wife and marry a Polish princess. The arrangement had not been made public, and a group called the 'Decembrists' tried to seize power while Constantine was in Poland. Nicholas put down the uprising, executed the ringleaders, and took the throne.

Nicholas I, (1825 - 1855), 1825 dated Medal or 'One and a Half Rouble' comprising 50 medals or pattern one and a half roubles in golden alloy, 50 medals or pattern one and a half roubles in polished pewter and 50 medals or pattern one and a half roubles in high grade copper, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (150)

$300

From a total mintage of only 750 pieces of each metal. Despotic by nature, Nicholas had little time for liberalism. He sought to partition the Ottoman Empire in Eastern Europe, in order to achieve greater Russian influence, but was surprised when Britain, France and some Italian states landed armies in the Crimea and laid siege to the fortified garrison of Sevastopol. After a year the town fell, exposing Russia's inability to defend a major fortification on its own soil. Before this, however, Nicholas had died, pondering the hopeless situation he had created.

Constantine, (1825), 1825 dated Medal or 'Pattern Rouble' comprising five pieces struck to proof quality in .925 sterling silver. Approximate weight 26 grams each piece, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (5)

Nicholas I, (1825 - 1855), 1825 dated Medal or 'Accession Rouble' comprising 50 medals or pattern roubles in golden alloy, 50 medals or pattern roubles and 50 in nickel silver, in high grade copper, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (150)

From a total mintage of only 750 pieces of each metal. Nicholas was the third son of Paul I and because he was considered unlikely to rule Russia he received an education in military engineering and travelled extensively. Having survived the Decembrist revolt he saw his role in Russia as that of a paternal autocrat who would keep heavy restraints on Russian society. In Europe he became the standard bearer for the forces of reaction.

$300

From a total mintage of only 750 pieces of each metal. The cause of Nicholas' death is unclear, but there are those who believe he poisoned himself after hearing of Russia's defeat at Eupatoria during the Crimean War. History has not been kind to Nicholas, although it sometimes said that he did not enjoy the role of autocrat, he simply felt he had no choice but to shun change.

$300

From a total mintage of only 975 pieces of each metal. Alexander was a pragmatic leader who veered away from the narrow autocratic views of his father Nicholas I. He quickly ended the embarrassing foreign policy manoeuvres and made peace in the Crimea. In 1861 he emancipated the serfs in Russia and began other relatively liberal reforms, but this did not prevent constant attempts on his life, and his eventual assassination by a bomber in March 1881.

Alexander II, (1855 - 1881), 1856 dated Medal or 'Coronation Rouble' comprising five pieces struck to proof quality in .925 sterling silver. Approximate weight 26 grams each piece, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (5)

$300

From a total mintage of only 975 pieces of each metal. The son of Alexander II, the new Czar and his wife, Maria Feodorovna, lived in Gatchina, the remote palace of his great grandfather Paul I. He was a large bluff man, and the assassination of his father was probably the chief reason for his ultra-cautious and reactionary attitude. He was an autocrat, but also a fierce patriot and a devoted family man. His main failing was that he left Russia mired in the past and failed to prepare his son for the challenges of the new century.

Alexander III, (1881 - 1894), 1856 dated Medal or 'Memorial Rouble' comprising five pieces struck to proof quality in .925 sterling silver. Approximate weight 26 grams each piece, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (5)

From a total mintage of only 450 pieces of each metal. The son of Czar Alexander III and Empress Maria Feodorovna, Nicholas was a gentle and approachable man, but according to contemporaries, contradictory in his moods. A steadfast believer in the divine rights of rulers he stubbornly resisted change in an era when common sense demanded pragmatism.

Nicholas II, (1894 - 1917), 1896 dated Medal or 'Coronation Rouble' comprising 50 medals or pattern roubles in polished pewter and 50 medals or pattern roubles in golden alloy and 50 medals or pattern roubles in high grade copper, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (150)

From a total mintage of only 650 pieces of each metal. The coronation of Nicholas II and Alexandra was a spectacle of pomp and ceremony, but the reign was soon blighted by a relentless flow of domestic and international problems which were virtually beyond the control of Nicholas. He was well-meaning and honourable, but in many ways unsuited to the exacting demands of the times.

Nicholas II, (1894 - 1917), 1896 dated Medal or 'Coronation Rouble' comprising five pieces struck to proof quality in .925 sterling silver. Approximate weight 26 grams each piece, struck to a prooflike/proof finish in limited quantities. FDC. (5)

From a total mintage of only 750 pieces of each metal. An unprepared Russia was dragged into the Great War in 1914 and a war of attrition saw the nation overwhelmed by the armies of the German and Austro-Hungarian empires. Nicholas abdicated in 1917, as the capital and the nation became ungovernable. The Czar with his beautiful daughters (Alexei, Anastasia Tatiana, Marie, Olga) his wife, and son Alexei, were imprisoned and later killed by the Bolsheviks, and the empire ended.

Diary of Francis Abbott, 1830s-1840s, a master watchmaker then convict transported to Tasmania and later an astronomer and meteorologist, his handwritten, leather covered diary (245mm x 198mm) with drawings, writings, explanations for making and repairing and generally the intricate details of all forms of watch making including not only watches but clocks, dials, equinoctial and equatorial astronomical clocks and sun dials; also includes contemporary scientific data cut-out from journals by him and glued into his diary as well as his astronomical writings and drawings. Very good and of great Australian and Tasmanian historical importance.

Francis Abbott was born in England, later served an apprenticeship as a clockmaker and then established his own clock making and repair business. He published a book, A Treatise on the Management of Public Clocks, London 1838 and also a catalogue, A Descriptive Catalogue of Horological and Astronomical Machinery, sold at his business premises in Manchester. In 1844 he was accused of obtaining two watches by false pretences, an accusation vehemently denied by Abbott. However, he was convicted and sentenced to seven years transportation to Tasmania. He arrived at Hobart Town in 1845, serving time in work gangs and after one year he was assigned as a servant. In 1849 he received a ticket-of-leave and then set about establishing a watch and clock making business. The business was very successful not only from public business but also from contracting to government institutions as he was called upon to erect many public clocks including one at Government House. The clock business was not his only work. Because of his interest in astronomy he had started recording his observations soon after arriving at the colony. Captain Joseph Kay gave him free access to the Rossbank Observatory and explained to him the method of registering and reducing. When the observatory closed in 1854 Abbott began to keep meteorological observations which were published each month in the Proceedings of the Royal Society of Tasmania. These records became the standard reference for the local climate and were also sent to the United States Meteorological Department for inclusion in world charts and printed for many years by the Tasmanian Government. Abbott was one of the pioneers to make observations from the southern hemisphere. He used scientific experimental techniques and kept himself abreast of the latest advances in Europe. In 1860 he was elected a member of the Royal Astronomical Society in London, contributing several papers which were published in its Monthly Notices. Between 1860-1874 a number of Abbott's papers were published in the Proceedings of the Tasmanian Royal Society and in Hobart he had published the following of his works, Modern Astronomy in 1878, Resume on Modern Astronomy in 1879 and Sidereal Systems of Modern Astronomy, Multiple Suns and Far-off Worlds in 1880. As the result of his extraordinary work, Abbott was recognized as one of the leading astronomers in Australia, became a member of the Royal Society of Tasmania in 1855 and a life member and councillor in 1861 and in 1869 was made a fellow of the Royal Meteorological Society and Royal Astronomical Society. During his lifetime he amassed a large philosophical and scientific library and an array of scientific instruments unique in the colony. Many of these now reside in museums and government institutions.

Dunera Statement, complaint of treatment together with witness statements by internees of No 7 Camp, Eastern Command, N.S.W., to the High Commissioner of the United Kingdom in Australia, twelve roneoed foolscap pages with a cover page featuring a drawing of Camp 7 viewed through a port hole (of H.M.T.Dunera), one of the few existing contemporary copies of the original sent by the joint editorial of the Camp Leaders and the Legal Department of Camp 7, Hay. Of great historical importance, fine and rare.

The inmates of Camp 7 initially were interned in England between May and July 1940 in consequence of general internment orders even though practically all were refugees of Nazi oppression because of their religious beliefs. They were then transferred to Camps 7 and 8 at Hay, N.S.W. Australia, being transported on H.M.T.Dunera.

Australia, WWII Internment Camp, Tatura, Victoria, POW letter dated 6 June 1941 and written in English, with attached sticker '3 Opened by Censor' and stamped '3 / Passed / By / Censor / 364' and stamp of 'Dead Letter Office Melbourne 3MR42', marked, 'George Lederer, E40027, Internment Camp, Orange, N.S.W. Australia', to an address in Sweden via Siberia, front stamped 'Passed By Censor / S.107', 'Approved For Transmission / By Camp Commandant / O/???', 'Not Transmissible / Service Suspended', 'Return to Sender'. Tear at side of letter otherwise fine.

George Lederer was a Dunera boy interred during WWII at camps in Hay and Tatura. He recalls that on 21 June 1942, about two weeks after he wrote this letter, war between Germany and the Soviet Union erupted and it is unlikely that the Transiberian railway was available for handling of regular mail. Whether the letter was returned from the Soviet border or somewhere along the route is unclear. The fact is that it was returned three months later, first to Orange, then back to Hay and since those camps had been abandoned by that time it reached the sender, George Lederer, in September in the Camp at Tatura, Victoria.
