Vladimiras (d. after 1398), the son of Algirdas, Grand Duke of Lithuania (1345-1377), was Grand Prince of Kiev from 1362 to 1394. Following the Battle of Blue Waters (1362), in which the Grand Duchy of Lithuania successfully pushed the Golden Horde from Ukraine, the Principality of Kiev fell permanently into the hands of the Grand Duchy of Lithuania. Shortly thereafter, Vladimiras was installed by his father in Kiev. Maintaining an independent rule, Vladimiras began minting his own coins. Initially, his coinage continued the earlier issues of the Golden Horde (perhaps an indication that the principality remained a tributary), but eventually replaced them with his own type. (continued next page)

Upon the accession of Wladyslaw II Jagiello as King of Poland in 1386, Vladimirus swore loyalty to him. Following the Ostrow Agreement, which ended the Lithuanian Civil War, the new Grand Duke of Lithuania, Vytautas removed Vladimirus as Prince, replacing him with his half-brother, Skirgaila. Vladimirus then received the Duchy of Sluckas. He was last mentioned in written sources in October 1398.

Ex Alexandre Caratheodory Pasha (1833-1906) Collection.

Alexandre Caratheodory Pasha, was a leading statesman in the Ottoman Empire, whose interest in collecting ancient coins was inspired by his meeting with the French diplomat and numismatist William-Henri Waddington at the Congress of Berlin in 1878. He was not only a prominent Greek scholar, diplomat, and statesman in the Ottoman Empire but formed one of the most important coin collections in the 19th century. His father, was the personal physician to Sultans Mahmud II and Abdul-Aziz. He obtain a doctoral degree from the Paris Faculty of Law and pursued a career in the public service of the Ottoman Empire. In 1874, he was appointed ambassador to Rome. In 1878, as Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs, he participated in the preliminary negotiations with Russia that led to the Treaty of San Stefano, ending the Russo-Turkish War (1877-1878). Later that same year, Sultan Abdul-Hamid II dispatched him to Germany as head of the Ottoman delegation to the Congress of Berlin. His skillful negotiations with various European statesmen, resulting in the revision of the San Stefano peace terms in favor of the Ottoman Empire (Treaty of Berlin, 1878). Disraeli characterized him as "full of finesse and yet calm and plausible." During the Berlin negotiations, he had the opportunity to discover in his French counterpart, William-Henri Waddington, a common interest in ancient Greek culture and civilization. Waddington told him of his archaeological pursuits and the collection of ancient coins he had assembled in Asia Minor. He was appointed Governor-General of Crete however, he was called back to Constantinople, where he became Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Ottoman Empire (1878-1879). He was the only Greek to ever occupy such a prominent position. In 1884, the Sultan appointed him Prince of the autonomous Greek island of Samos (1885-1894). It is during those nine years, and inspired by Waddington's enthusiasm for ancient coins, that he took up coin collecting and amassed an important collection.

In 1895, amid renewed religious and social tensions in Crete, Abdul Hamid II appointed him as Governor of the island for a second time, but resigned in December of the same year and was appointed First Translator to H.I.M. the Sultan. In 1901, he attended the funeral of Queen Victoria as a member of the Ottoman delegation. This was his last official assignment. His funeral in 1906, in Constantinople, was officiated by the Patriarch and all the Holy Synod. In 1923 his children and grandchildren left Turkey. Some of them settled in Greece, others in Egypt, Switzerland, and Belgium, the coins were sold by CNG during 2015.

Winners of the year's Dominion scouting competition were granted the title of the King's Troop of Canada. In 1913 the winners were the Paris Troop from the town of Paris, Ontario. The troop, including officers, comprised approximately 31 persons.

In The Register, Adelaide newspaper, Tuesday 29 May 1923 it was reported as follows,

'The manager of the team Tasmanian soccer team is Mr.J.H.Storr, who at one time was well known in Adelaide. Mr. Storr is Chairman of the Tasmanian Association, and has done a great amount of work in fostering the round-ball game in Tasmania, having twice represented the Island State in conference of the Commonwealth Association at Melbourne. Since leaving Adelaide some years back, Mr. Storr has had a varied experience in football management. After spending some months in the various States of Australia, he went to New Zealand, where he stayed four years, afterwards migrating to Canada and the United States. He was captain of Harvard and Yale University teams in America. Returning to Australia, Mr. Storr made his home in Tasmania, where he is now well established in business. He will no doubt be glad to see old Adelaide friends.'

The medal on offer was discovered in Tasmania and since Mr J H Shorr referred to in the article above was in Canada prior to 1923 and later migrated to Tasmania it seems likely that he is the recipient of the medal in this lot, perhaps as one of the adult officers of the troop.

Together with framed coloured caricature of Marcel Nagy carrying wads of bank notes and a bag of money to the bank; a framed b&w photo of Marcel Nagy at the football in Sydney; various documents and newspaper clippings, several of these in Hungarian, some with English translation. Included are important references, including a glowing report from the Hungarian Football Federation, and offers of important football management positions as well as documents relating to the establishment of Soccer World magazine.

Upon Marcel Nagy's death a warm tribute was published in Soccer World, Vol 15, No 1, 21 January 1972. Under the banner, 'Soccer Pioneer Dies in Sydney', it stated as follows,

'It is with extreme sadness that we announce the death of Marcel Nagy, one of the founders of "Soccer World". He died on December 24, at the age of 79, in Sydney Hospital.

He came to Australia in 1957, after an illustrious sporting career in his native Hungary. For some 35 years, he was one of Hungary's leading soccer administrators. In 1957, immediately after the Revolution, he became president. However, a few months later he left Budapest to join his daughter in Sydney.

Marcel Nagy played a major part in the spectacular development of European soccer between the two world wars. A close friend of Austria's Hugo Meisl, he was instrumental in the formation of the Mitropa Cup, forerunner of all of today's great European cup events. For years he was a member of FIFA executive and attended World Cups and Olympics. After the last war it was Marcel Nagy who introduced Football Pools in Hungary.

Soon after his arrival in Sydney, he and a few friends decided to start a soccer weekly - "Soccer World". Since then several publications have started and folded up - "Soccer World", however, has been publishing without interruption ever since, now starting its 15th year. During all these years Marcel Nagy was Chairman of Soccer World Publishing Co as well as the newspaper's Business Manager.

His inestimable contribution to the establishment of soccer in Australia was widely acknowledged. Some years ago he was invited to join the NSW Management Committee while the St George Budapest Club elected him Life President.'

Marcel Nagy was the father of Marta Daniel who, with her husband, operated a well known and respected coin and stamp shop in Sydney City under the name of Martin Daniel. When her husband died Marta continued trading for many more years until she sold her business, then located in the Royal Arcade, and retired.
