The Chou Dynasty (1125 - 255 BC) paved the way for the first unification of China in 221 BC. During the Zhou dynasty, China evolved from a feudal state with power divided among vassals to one with a strong centralized government. The practice of casting weapons, farm implements and coins out of iron and copper had begun during this time, permitting the Chou to grow considerably. This was a time of great prosperity that would not be seen again in China for many centuries. Included in this was the development of money, which changed from its old form to one where coins acquired inscriptions of various types, mostly referring to weights, values and location of origin. In this case there is an ancient 'cowrie' shaped piece, but with the addition of the wording, known as 'pi'ch'ien or ant nose money. Each high quality piece dates from the 3rd Century before Christ and bears a hole for easy handling in quantity.

$150

Ex Patrick J.O'Rourke Collection and from Monetarium Sale No.1 18th April 2008 (lot 143) some others from Singapore Coin Auction No.30, March 2000 (lot 9).

These pieces are clay funerary "gold cake" money, dating to the Western Han dynasty (206 B.C. - 9 A.D.) or slightly later. During the early Western Han dynasty, the gold plate money was no longer manufactured. Instead, slabs of gold in shape of little round "cakes" with various patterns on them were produced in the regions around the Yellow river. Clay copies of these cakes were also produced, and these probably had some ceremonial or funerary use. They used to be extremely rare until recently when a number of them appeared on the market. The hand broken off from an old bronze statue probably comes from about the same time.

Bronze mirrors have a long history in Chinese culture, dating to at least the 11th century B.C. Many mirrors were placed with their owners in ancient tombs. Some even have been passed down from generation to generation for many years in the same family.

Mirrors were more uniform and typically round in Han Dynasty (206 BC - 220 AD) while greater variety is observed in the Song and Yuan dynasties (10th -14th century) when different forms, such as oblong and octagonal appeared. Some mirrors have a handle or eyelets for hanging as in this example. In the last few centuries, during the reign of the Qing dynasty (1616-1911), bronze mirrors were gradually replaced by glass mirrors.
