$4,000

The first two spoons ex John Williams Auctions, 30 October 2006, lot S181 (part), the Ruth Pope Collection. Previously the collection of Eleanor Oxley.

John Oxley arrived in the colony in 1812. He was Surveyor General of NSW, 1812-1828. Explorer and land owner. Samuel Clayton of Sydney is reported to have supplied silverware to John Oxley and the engraving on these spoons is attributed to him.

The six Meehan crest dessert spoons ex John Williams Auctions, 21 January 2008, lots S176 and S203, the Ruth Pope Collection. Previously the collection of Eleanor Oxley. It is believed that these spoons have been "modernised" locally to the fiddleback pattern and engraved with the crest of James Meehan.

James Meehan was a convicted Irishman who was transported to Sydney in 1800. He was eventually pardoned and became Deputy Surveyor General in 1806.

The six JE monogram spoons ex John Williams Auctions, 21 January 2008, lot S206, the Ruth Pope Collection. Previously the collection of Eleanor Oxley. The JE monogram on these spoons attributes the ownership to James Erskine, a Colonel who arrived in Sydney in 1817 and was sworn as Lieutenant Governor shortly after. The table spoon ex John Williams Auctions, 30 October 2006, lot S181 (part), the Ruth Pope Collection. Previously the collection of Eleanor Oxley. The monogram attributes ownership of this spoon to James Bowman who was appointed principal surgeon of the colony in 1819 and married Mary Macarthur in 1823. He served in the NSW Legislative Council from 1823-1825.

The two table spoons ex John Williams Auctions, 30 October 2006, lot S181 (part), the Ruth Pope Collection. Previously the collection of Eleanor Oxley.

The lion crest is provisionally attributed to George Allen who was the son of Dr Richard Allen, physician to George III. He arrived in 1816 and was admitted to practice as a solicitor in 1822. He was the first solicitor who had received legal training in the colony and founded the oldest legal firm in Australia.

The boar's head crest dessert spoon ex Aalders Auctions 2 February 2019, lot 86.

The boar's head crest is attributed to Robert Campbell Jnr and the dates of import match those of the Oxley family silver in the Museum of Applied Arts and Sciences. Samuel Clayton's engraving matches that on this piece. Robert Campbell Jnr was a significant merchant, pastoralist and politician in the colony.

The boar's head crest teaspoons ex Aalders Auctions 3 February 2019, lot 293. Attributed to Robert Campbell Jnr.

The boar's head crest serving spoon ex Aalders Auctions 7 April 2019, lot 270. Attributed to Robert Campbell Jnr.

In 1932 the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago was renamed to become the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Company of Chicago. At one time it was the 7th largest bank in America but in 1984 it became, at that time, the largest bank failure in US history. In the 1980s prior to its collapse, it sold part of its reserves to raise funds. It held approximately 1.5 million US silver dollars as part of its reserves and with the then rise in the price of silver these silver dollars were sold to an American coin dealer and are now sold individually and categorised as Ex The Continental-Illinois Bank Horde.
