Aktaion had inadvertently seen Artemis bathing. In her anger she changed him into a stag and he was torn to pieces by her own dogs. This myth is popular in Greek vase painting but only found on coins from Kyzikos, Lampsakos and this hekte of Mytilene and in all cases for one issue only. On this piece the transformation from a youth to the stag is illustrated with the hair turning into a mane.

Bodenstedt knew of only four examples of this type from these dies.

Nero Claudius Drusus was the second son of Livia by her first husband, Tiberius Claudius Nero. He was brought up in the household of Augustus, who took note of his abilities and fast-tracked his advancement in military and civil affairs. In 16 BC he was married to Antonia, daughter of Mark Antony and Octavia, and the happy union produced two sons, Germanicus and the future emperor Claudius. In 12 BC, Augustus gave him command of the planned conquest of Germany, which he seemed to have achieved in four skilfully waged campaigns over the next three years. His letters written during this time (later excerpted by Suetonius) indicated he hoped for a restoration of the Republic, an attitude which might have strained relations with Augustus. But Drusus never returned to Rome, for a serious equestrian accident in Germany led to an infection which claimed his life in the summer of 9 BC. Despite his Republican leanings, his brother Tiberius and son Claudius both became Roman emperors, the latter of whom struck this coin honoring his illustrious father.

Situated on the southern coast of Sicily, Gela was founded in 688 BC by Cretans and Rhodians. It rose to become the most influential state on the island. In 485 its ruler Gelon seized Syracuse and transferred his capital there, taking with him many of the leading citizens. His brother Hieron, later tyrant of Syracuse, was left in charge of Gela. Tetradrachm issues at Gela probably began circa 480 BC, shortly thereafter becoming the principal denomination of the Geloan coinage, and remaining so down to the time of the destruction of the city by Carthaginian invaders in 405 BC. The ultimate design of the tetradrachms displayed a racing chariot, borrowed from the Syracusan coinage, and the forepart of a man-headed bull. The rather brutal half-length figure of the man-headed bull swimming right is based on the 'father of all rivers', Achelous, and is clearly identified by the ethnic Gelas as the personification of the river Gelas rushing to its mouth, where the city Gela stood. It was defined by Virgil (Aen. 3, 702) as 'immanisque Gela fluvii cognomina dicta.'

A similar example from the same dies in the CNG Triton VIII Auction Sale January 11, 2005, (lot 222, weighed 38.80 grams (same weight, realised $7250 + 15%US). The Derrones were a Thraco-Macedonian tribe that lived in the mountainous Pangei region (Pernar), on the river Strymon in Macedon. Types exist with the ox cart going to left and others to the right. Recent hoards and other earlier finds suggest less than 100 of these large silver coins survive today. The context and meaning of the types of the Derrones' dodekadrachms are still being debated. Little is known of this tribe other than what can be gleaned from their surviving coinage. Hoard find-spots suggest that they inhabited inland Paeonia, and the absence of their coins from the Asyut hoard suggests that the coinage postdates the burial of that hoard. The obverse type depicts a male figure who is most likely the tribal king and hereditary high priest while the helmet suggests a military reference.

The Western Black Sea coast had several important centres on trade and consequently a few coin types of pre-monetary items were introduced including 'dolphins', 'arrowheads' and 'wheel coins' all were cast in copper. Originally most were thought to be from Olbia but more recent hoard evidence indicates that they were mostly produced in Istros or Apollonia. These 'wheel coins' above were produced in Istros (from the ethnic on the reverse). A century or so later they were replaced by struck coins with different motifs.

The Pergamon mint issues of Lysimachos are considered to have, numismatically, the finest of the artistic representations of portraiture of Alexander the Great. The issues signed by the engraver K are considered the best of the dramatic style and the closest to the Copenhagen head of Alexander, which Herbert A. Cahn attributes to his second creative die-cutter "Modellmeister B", c.287 B.C. It was at "the mint in Pergamon while Philetairos was serving Lysimachos there from c.287 B.C. to c.282 B.C. the Alexander heads were done in a local version of this later style which is distinctive and very beautiful (fig. 3a)" Blanche R. Brown "Royal Portraits in Sculpture and Coins" p.14); (fig 3a is the best K tetradrachm in the ANS collection which is in similar condition to this specimen). "In them the surface richness remains but the modelling is more sensitive and subtle. The basic form is relatively more plastic and unified, with fewer concave transitions and with convex forms more clearly delimited and structured... the drawing itself is suave and refined. The Pergamene Alexander ... still has a pervading sense of movement and life. Its particular refinements of features and outlines are not echoed in the Copenhagen portrait, but the smoother, more simplified transitions of the modelling of the face are comparable." Ex CNG Triton III, November 30-December 1, 1999 (lot 1743 part).

The Koinon of Macedonians under the Roman Empire was a religious and administrative confederation of Macedonian cities going back to the Macedonian kings under Perseus and Philip V. The capital of the Koinon was located at Beroia, where it celebrated pentettric Olympic Games. Coinage struck by the Koinon regularly advertised the glories of the past especially that of the greatest Macedonian Alexander the Great. This present coin struck during the reign of Gordian III in 242 A.D. when Gordian III passed through the city to make war on the Sasanian or Persian Empire. It portrays Alexanders head on the obverse with his elevated gaze, thus indicative of his pothos (longing) to do the impossible and ascend to the gods. The reverse type depicts Alexander charging into battle on the back of his beloved horse, Bucephalus. The link to Gordian and its issue is an attempt for the emperor to repeat the same feat as Alexander and to destroy the Persian Empire. History shows that Gordian failed in his battle with the Sasanians and was killed following his defeat.

The Dog Star Seirios (Sirius) was associated with the heat of summer, drought and pestilence. The heliacal rising of Seirios occurred shortly before the summer solstice, and the period that followed was termed by the ancients as the 'dog days' of summer. Seirios held particular importance at Keos, a bright clear appearance of the star portended good fortune, while a faint appearance signaled pestilence.

Tissaphernes played an important part in Persian politics. He had a significant effect on the outcome of the Peloponnesian War, particularly in the war between Artaxerxes and Prince Cyrus. He was one of four generals of Artaxerxes and made a decisive contribution to his victory at Kunaxa (Xenophon, Anabasis I 8, 9f). In 395 B.C. Tissaphernes was executed probably mainly because of his failures against the Spartan army of Agesilaus in Asia Minor.

The 'Kroisos' type coinage is one of the most recognizable of all ancient Greek coinage. All the issues in gold and silver feature the same confronted lion and bull foreparts on the obverse, and the two incuse punches (or single punch on the smaller denominations) on the reverse. The series of the heavy issue in gold or silver are of equal weight 10.6-10.7 g and reduced according to half, third, sixth and twelfth stater. The first bimetallic series with gold to silver ratio of 10:1. According to Herodotus, Kroisos was the first monarch to mint gold and silver coins. This coin the lightest in the series and one of the rarest is fixed at 1/12th of the stater in weight should be about 0.88 g.
