On 23rd March 1957 a Casino pilot, Lawrence William McMahon was killed when the Royal Newcastle Aero Club Chipmunk he was flying crashed coming to rest about 400 yards off the Casino-Tenterfield Road. The plane had just flown over the home of Mr James Hollis and struck a tree. Hollis, who knew the pilot, ran to the site of the burning wreckage and even though the plane was entangled in high tension wires and he was in great danger of electrocution, he still pulled McMahon's body away from the wrecked aircraft. Then with the help of a friend stripped the burning clothes from the pilot's body. At this point they could still hear the crackling from the 'live' high tension wires on the plane. Despite the brave actions of Hollis, the pilot died. Records indicate a bronze award however this appears to be an incorrect entry as the medal is silver. Together with photocopy of the Richmond River Express newspaper detailing the accident for which Hollis received the award.

Together with a photo, written on back, 'Peter Handcock. Taken on his second marriage day 1956 died 1966. Only son (child?) of Peter Handcock shot in South Africa during Boer War.' The father, Peter Joseph Handcock, also a railwayman, enlisted for the South African War as a shoemaker in the 2nd Contingent of the New South Wales Mounted Rifles. In February 1900 he was promoted Farrier Sergeant before transferring to the Railway Services Police. Then, in February 1901, he joined the Bushveldt Carbineers as a veterinary lieutenant. After the officer in command of the unit, Captain P Hunt, was killed and his body mutilated, Lieutenant H.H. Breaker Morant, a close friend of Hunt, ordered that all Boer prisoners be shot from that day on. The BVC rigorously hunted Boers and all prisoners and those who surrendered were shot. After a German missionary was shot, General Kitchener ordered a full investigation and subsequently Morant, Handcock and other officers were arrested. Following a dubious general court martial proceeding, Morant and Handcock were found guilty and shot by firing squad in Pretoria goal on 27 February 1902. Thus Handcock became the first Australian national executed for war crimes. With photo of son, Peter Handcock, and research.

Presented to Prof. Martin A. Green, Scientia professor (ARC Photovoltaics Centre of Excellence, School of Photovoltaic and Renewable Energy Engineering) at the University of New South Wales (UNSW). See the following lot for biographical details.

The aim of the ENI award is to encourage a better use of energy sources, promote environmental research and valorise new generations of researchers. The award is made annually by the major Italian integrated energy company, Eni S.p.A., demonstrating the company's commitment to scientific research and to issues of sustainability characterised by the complexity and completeness of the approach to the issue of sustainable energy. The Award has a consolidated and prestigious network of researchers in the field of energy and the environment and has been awarded to three Nobel prize-winners. More than 800 researchers from around the world have submitted their research projects, to which should be added the numerous personalities who have guaranteed or been a part of the various evaluation commissions. The Award's Scientific Committee - which has the role of evaluating the candidates and assigning the prizes, is of the highest level and comprises researchers and scientists from some of the world's most advanced research institutes, and includes the Nobel prize-winner Sir Harold Kroto. Each of the winners declared by the Committee will receive a prize of a gold medal specially minted by the Italian Zecca di Stato (State Mint) with prize money totalling Euros 725,000 (seven hundred and twenty-five thousand euros).

$7,000

Presented to Prof. Martin A. Green, (born 1948) who is Scientia professor (ARC Photovoltaics Centre of Excellence, School of Photovoltaic and Renewable Energy Engineering) at the University of New South Wales (UNSW) who works intensively with the development of the use of solar energy. He was born in Brisbane and was educated at the selective Brisbane State High School, graduated from University of Queensland and completed his PhD on a Commonwealth Scholarship at McMaster University in Canada, where he specialised in solar energy. In 1974, at the University of New South Wales, he initiated the Solar Photovoltaics Group which soon worked on the development of silicon solar cells. The group had their success in the early 80s through producing a 20% efficient silicon cell, which now has been improved to 25%. He has published several books on solar cells both for popular science and deep research, and has been recognized with different awards including the above. He also serves on the Board of the Sydney-based Pacific Solar Pty Ltd. (now known as CSG Solar), as Research Director The Zayed Future Energy Prize was created in honour of the legacy of the late Founding Father and President of the United Arab Emirates, His Highness Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan Al Nahyan. The prize aims to inspire the next generation of global energy innovators to create solutions for the future. The Prize is awarded annually to individuals, companies or organisations that have made significant contributions in the global response to the future of energy, climate change and sustainable global energy resources. The prize includes $1.5 million prize money, a certificate and a gold medal.
